

Pinchot Pledges Self To "Defeat Attack Of Public Utilities"

ALSO PROMISES TO CARRY OUT WILL OF VOTERS

Wars on "Election Crookedness" as He Becomes Keystone Governor

Harrisburg—(AP)—Gifford Pinchot today was inaugurated governor of Pennsylvania.

A great gathering of citizens saw the tall, slender, gray-haired political warrior, sworn in at ceremonies of ostentation and pomp. In keeping with his desire for a simple and informal inauguration, he wore the soft gray slouch hat so familiar to those who had seen him in his recent "stumping" tours of Pennsylvania.

While Mr. Pinchot's induction ceremonies lacked much of the pomp and ceremony of other like proceedings, he did not want for vociferous and demonstrative greeting from the thousands of persons who witnessed his return to the state's highest office.

Governor Pinchot, inaugurated governor of Pennsylvania today for the second time, pledged the full power of his administration "to defeat the attack of the public utilities" and to "carry through the will of the voters that election crookedness shall cease to disgrace," the state.

"Here in Pennsylvania," said the governor in his inaugural address, "a carefully planned, elaborately financed, and powerfully directed attack upon the rule of the people under the law has made substantial progress. It aims to substitute government by the public utilities for government by the people. It is not confined to Pennsylvania. Not a single state in the Union is free from a similar attempt."

Scores of exceptions the men who ment of this commonwealth would transfer the government of this commonwealth to great special interests are not Pennsylvanians. Their seat of power is in another state."

On prohibition the governor said: "On the wet and dry issue my record speaks louder than any words. It is well known not only that I believe in obeying and enforcing the eighteenth amendment because it is the law, but that I am convinced supporter of the amendment itself. I repeat the declaration made in my first inaugural—this administration will be dry."

Governor Pinchot repeated in his inaugural his campaign pledges which included the abolishment of the Public Service commission, the election in its place of a fair rate board, to revise the public service law so as to make the fair rate board the defender of the people against high rates and poor service, to abolish the coal and iron police, to prevent unfair use of labor injunction, to secure old age pensions for the helpless poor, to prevent all political assessments, to see that the state assists disabled and neglected ex-service men, to secure clean elections.

CHINA FROWNS ON ALIENS WHO CARRY CAMERA ON TOURS

Shanghai—(AP)—Tourists with cameras are no longer welcome in China unless they confine their picture taking to scenes pleasing and beautiful to look upon.

Photographing of beggars, bound feet, huts and naked children is being discouraged by Chinese officials who claim that such pictures are detrimental to the best interests of the nation.

Authorities of Greater Shanghai, that part of the city known as Chinese territory, have passed an order forbidding the amateur photographer to enter their domain and advise from official sources at Nanking say it is probable that other large cities in the country will follow suit.

In passing the order officials stated that they were becoming tired of having China shown at its worst abroad.

They were quite willing to admit the existence of beggars, ill-smelling, dismal homes and naked babies but inasmuch as the government is making an earnest attempt to remove such evils, they could see no reason why these evils should be photographed. It was possible for a tourist with a camera to find some of the family which still persists in breaking the law by minding the feet of girl babies but they questioned the justice of agitating them.

No end of agitation has followed the ban. Both Chinese and foreign amateurs have objected on the grounds that the officials are ill-advised in attempting to hide the fact that many of the old customs and practices ordered banned by the government still exist. They further maintain that the order is useless inasmuch as most of the sordidness of the Chinese section exists in the international settlement and the French concession, where photographs can be taken.

WOULD ABANDON TINY ILLINOIS RAILROAD

Interstate Commerce Commission Considers Fate of 11-mile Stretch

Chicago—(AP)—The glorious past and the gloomy present of the little 11-mile Harvard and Geneva Lake railway were before the Interstate Commerce commission today, backing up a petition by the road that it be abandoned.

President William McKinley of the languishing little line, told the commission yesterday its officers are unpaid, it is an electric line without wires, and it has scant prospect of competing with the paved road that stretches almost the entire length of its rails.

The American Sand and Gravel company asked that government serum be injected into the veins of the "system." Once the company shipped as many as 40 cars of gravel from its Pontiana, Wis., plant. The gravel company protested that abandonment would make worthless its $60,000 plant and diggings.

The road once linked the Northwestern, out of Chicago, with the popular Lake Geneva summer resort. Now one can find more Illinois license plates in Lake Geneva than Wisconsin ones, in the summer.

In 1929, the line lost $20,505, despite the fact that the president, general counsel, and directors drew no pay. The only salaries collected $3,600, McKinley said, but he also acted as operations manager, division manager, conductor pro tem and station master.

The Harvard and Geneva Lake railway rolling stock now consists of an electric locomotive, 12 box cars and a freight car.

FIRE CAUSES DAMAGE TO MARSTON OIL TRUCK

An oil truck of the Marston Brothers company was badly damaged by fire about 7 o'clock last night on Highway 151 near Butte des Morts Golf club. The fire started from an oil truck. The driver succeeded in removing several drums of oil before the blaze touched them.

The Marston Brothers company called the fire department and called and put out the blaze with chemicals after the cab had been burned from the truck.

Holmes, who was ill.

Two groups of young people discussed the ideal man and woman at the meeting Sunday evening. Courage, inspiration, religion, selflessness, and domestic abilities were the qualities stressed at the meeting of the Baptist group. The same subject was discussed at the First Reformed church.

LIBRARIANS WATCH TO PREVENT DAMAGE BY YOUNG PATRONS

Mutilation of Books and Magazines Are Objects of Vandal's Attacks

Mutilation of magazines and reference books at the Appleton public library has caused library attaches to increase their surveillance of younger patrons. The mutilation has even carried to the point of cutting definitions from the dictionary rather than copy them.

The bound magazines and reference books are most often the object of vandals, although often the sections of other books are ripped out. Maps are torn from books and magazines, pictures are cut from art books, and dictionaries and encyclopedias are often torn and defaced.

The state law governing mutilation of public library volumes imposes a punishment of six months in the county jail or a fine not exceeding $100.

The law follows: "Any person who shall willfully, maliciously or wantonly... tear, deface, mutilate or injure any book, map, pamphlet, chart, picture or other property belonging to any public library, or take and carry away the same with intent to convert to his own use... shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than six months or by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars."

REVISE CORRUPT PRACTICES ACT, BILL PROPOSES

Measure Increasing Limit on Campaign Expenses Introduced in Assembly

Madison—(AP)—A bill to revise the Corrupt Practices Act which governs the conduct of political campaigns in Wisconsin was introduced in the state assembly here today.

It embodies the recommendations of the legislative campaign investigating committee which held a series of hearings since its formation in 1929.

The contention of many candidates that the $4,000 limit set on campaign expenses for gubernatorial candidates was too low was accepted by the committee which recommended a limit of $12,000. The limit on campaign expenditures by other candidates and the comparison with the present limit follows:

U. S. Senators, $12,000, increase of $4,500; representative in congress, $2,000, decrease of $500; state officers, excluding the governor, $3,000, increase of $1,000; state senator, $600, increase of $200; member of assembly, $300, increase of $150; judge of supreme court, $5,000; formerly one-third of salary; delegates at large and district delegates to national party conventions, $1,000 and $500, respectively.

The bill provides that: All candidates for state offices and members of the legislature must appoint a personal campaign committee to have charge of the candidate's campaign funds. Candidates may be members of these committees.

Candidates are to be held accountable for collections and expenditures made by personal committees. Candidates may conduct joint campaigns and require a joint campaign committee. Candidates in joint campaign may spend 90 per cent of the total amount allowed for candidates conducting individual campaigns.

Expenditures will be controlled by volunteer committees and individuals. Contributors are prohibited from making political contributions to persons or campaigns other than duly authorized personal campaign committees.

Bagg Explains Reasons For Wisconsin Droughts

Although Appleton and most of this section of Wisconsin lies in the center of two major storm belts and should have an average yearly rainfall of 32 inches, there has been a constantly growing deficiency in precipitation covering a period of four years, according to Dr. Rufus Mather Bagg of the geology department of Lawrence college.

Farmers in this section of the state have just cause for becoming alarmed because of the recent droughts and lack of precipitation. Dr. Bagg said. He is now supervising drilling of wells in the vicinity of Sherwood and High Cliff, where the water supply is said to be exceptionally scarce.

"Surface wells and streams have dried up and farmers are forced to drill wells for watering their cattle," Dr. Bagg said. "This is perhaps the first time in the past half century that conditions have gained such serious proportions.

The drought last fall slowed up fountains and lowered the level of water in artesian wells in many instances.

The greatest deficiency in rainfall during the past four years occurred last year when only 16.73 inches of rain fell, according to Dr. Bagg.

The first deficiency in rainfall was noticed in 1927 with only 26.39 inches. In 1928 there was a deficiency of 2.5 inches and in 1929 only 28 inches of rain fell, Dr. Bagg explained.

"Wisconsin lies between two major storm belts which insure the state a fairly uniform rainfall of 32 inches over the entire region," he said.

"One belt sweeps down from the northwest, crossing the lower end of Lake Superior and then travels off over the St. Lawrence river. The other begins in the southwest, sweeps over Chicago, across Lake Michigan, and then out over the Great Lakes toward the Atlantic ocean.

"During the past few years, especially the last two, there have been few storms in both these belts, thereby bringing about the deficiency."

PROPRIETOR OF BROTHEL FINED $150 AND COSTS

First Arrest Made Under County's New Dance Hall Ordinance

A fine of $150 and costs was paid by Haywood Hall, formerly of Iron Mountain, when he pleaded guilty in municipal court before Judge Theodore Berg Monday afternoon of operating a disorderly house. Miss Blanche Williams, Milwaukee, who was arrested with Hall, was fined $25 and costs for being an inmate of a house of ill fame.

The two were arrested in a raid on the Travlers' Inn on Highway 41, between Appleton and Kimberly, about midnight Saturday. The sheriff's posse was led by Edward Lutz, undersheriff.

Harry Collar, operator of Duck Inn on Highway 26 between Hortonville and New London, was fined $25 and costs for operating a dance hall without a license and without having a dance supervisor in attendance. Collar was arrested Monday on a complaint signed by Charles Steidl, county motorcycle officer. Officer Steidl visited the roadhouse Saturday night and found a dance in progress. Collar's arrest was the first under the new county dance hall ordinance.

Collar, who also was charged with having slot machines in his possession pleaded guilty. However, when Sheriff John Lappen pointed out that the slot machines were no longer in Collar's place when he was arrested Monday, the judge asked Collar where they were. Collar explained that some man, whose name he did not know, had taken them away. The judge deferred sentence until 9 o'clock Wednesday and told Collar that the slot machines are to be produced in court at that time, and no excuses will be accepted.

Charges against Miss Lulu Blank, who was named in the warrants with Collar, were dismissed by Judge Berg when Collar assumed all blame and pointed out that Miss Blank was in no way connected with the operation of the business.

CHURCHES PLAN FOR WORLD PRAYER DAY

11 Denominations to Participate in Services Here Feb. 20

The World Day of Prayer will be observed in Appleton on Feb. 20, with 11 denominations participating. This year World Day of Prayer, an interdenominational "and world-wide event, will be observed in 41 countries. Seventeen hundred cities in the United States and 800 in Canada will hold services.

The custom had its origin in 1887, when a denominational day of prayer was held by Presbyterian women. In 1890 it became an interdenominational event in connection with a triennial conference of women's boards of foreign missions. The first interdenominational day of prayer that was countrywide was held in 1896, while the first world-wide day of prayer was in 1927.

The purpose of the custom, according to Miss Esther Miller, chairman of the local observance, is to further interest in inter-racial relations and to promote world peace. The call to prayer which goes out to all lands this year was prepared by Baroness van Boetzeler van Dubbleddam of Netherlands.

Originally only women participated, but last year the Y. M. C. A. in one city cooperated with the women in an evening meeting, and now young people's and children's groups are taking up the idea.

On the committee which prepares material for the day there are representatives of all denominations, races, and nationalities, making it in the fullest sense interdenominational, inter-racial and international.

The free will offering taken on the world day of prayer goes to pay for Christian literature for women and children in all mission fields for Women's Union Christian colleges in Japan, China and India, for Indian work in the United States, and for the establishment of social centers, especially in the United States, for migrants.

Select Vegetables With Care For Small Garden

Selecting what to grow in a vegetable garden of limited space is most important. Often the owner tries to grow too many kinds of vegetables with the result that he doesn't have an adequate supply of any of them. Then, too, he may find that he has grown vegetables that are not particularly relished by his family.

In making a selection for a small garden select those vegetables that the family likes best as a starter. In the next place grow vegetables of which there is not a sure and large supply in the neighborhood. Grow vegetables of better quality, which a seed catalogue will tell you about, and improve on the staple grown by the market gardeners of the vicinity. Commercial growers are slow to adopt new comers, but rely on old-time varieties which are good but not as good as some of the newer varieties.

If there are small children in the family nothing could be more appropriate than a garden for food needed particularly by the children, such as spinach, carrots, tomatoes, Swiss chard. A small garden devoted entirely to tomatoes of the finest varieties will be eminently satisfactory. A salad garden will be a joy for salad vegetables are never at their freshest and crispest in the market.

A foot garden in which root crops alone are planted yields the most for the space in the way of carrots, beets, turnips, parsnips, salsify, onions and radishes. All have small tops and are easy to cultivate.

A garden of herbs when the space is unusually small will give many a tasty dish and the herbs may be dried and saved for use all winter. Sage, marjoram, the savories, sweet basil, thyme, lavender are a few of the possibilities here.

The peas, to be followed by later crops of carrots, beets or turnips, offer another attractive small garden subject. There are seldom too many peas—the season is short for each planting and surplus can be canned.

A canning garden in which string beans, peas, tomatoes and other material can be grown is another useful type.

RECOVER CAR BEFORE THEFT IS DISCOVERED

A Ford sedan, owned by Leo Flashaka, a chef at Conway hotel, which was stolen from the rear of that place between 7:30 and 10 o'clock Sunday night had been recovered at Kaukauna before the theft was discovered. However, there was some difficulty in tracing the ownership of the car, as it bore a 1931 license and police at Kaukauna did not yet have 1931 license records. Monday, however, the owner was discovered and the car was returned to the owner. It had been damaged in an accident and the thief had fled.

RED CROSS SEEKS $1,000 FUND FOR NATIONAL DRIVE

Hopes to Secure Money by Voluntary Subscription, Chairman Says

The Outagamie-co chapter of the American Red Cross is seeking $1,000 through voluntary subscription for the nation-wide Red Cross campaign, according to Arthur Jensen, chairman of the county organization. Subscriptions are being received by Mr. Jensen, 223 E. Spring st. and P. M. Conkey, 121 W. College-ave. The national organization is seeking $10,000,000 to aid families of unemployed men, and persons living in drought stricken areas.

"The county chapter is unable to make a concentrated or organized campaign for its quota because of the work now being conducted by the organization on the Oneida Indian reservation," Mr. Jensen said.

National Red Cross appropriations to assist local chapters in meeting food and clothing needs in the drought stricken areas of the country on Jan. 14 totaled $619,731.50, according to word received here from headquarters in St. Louis, Mo.

Since Jan. 14 the number of counties in which it is necessary for the Red Cross to render assistance has jumped from 350 to approximately 400. Calls for relief in Oklahoma and Texas have mounted in the past few days. The total expenditure up to Jan. 14, including all types, clothing and food was $1,352,837.54, it is reported.

Lower And Upper Fox Valley Cities Plan Fight On Lake Level

OSHKOSH GROUP SEEKS RECALL OF U. S. ORDER

Mayor B. W. Fargo of Kaukauna to Call Meeting to Battle for Rights

BULLETIN
Oshkosh—(P)—The war department, Congressman Reilly and Senator La Follette today had copies of a protest from Mayor T. J. Brown against the war department order raising the level of Lake Winnebago. The mayor, in a telegram, urged the order be held up until a government survey can be completed.

Lines are being drawn by city officials of lower and upper Fox river valley cities for a pitched battle over the level of Lake Winnebago. Last week the war department at Washington, D. C., ordered that the present level of the lake, 16 inches above the crest of the government dam at Menasha, be restored to 21 inches above the dam. This meant that the lower valley cities had won their battle for a higher level.

An organization headed by Mayor B. W. Fargo of Kaukauna, whose activity crystallized the movement for a return to the higher level, succeeded in enlisting most of the Fox river valley cities in the campaign. As a result most of the cities sent petitions asking the return to a higher level.

It was the contention of these cities that raising the lake level would provide more water during the dry summer months for fishing the river, thus eliminating the cause of the spread of disease. During the low water caused the odor to arise from the river and stagnant water killed thousands of fish. The stench forced many residents to abandon their summer homes along the river, it was reported.

The war department held that the 15-inch level, which has been in effect for seven years, had proved unsatisfactory. It found the lower level detrimental to navigation as well as to sanitation and health in cities of the lower level.

Plan Opposition
As soon as it learned of the new order the Association for the relief of High Water at Oshkosh called a meeting of directors last Saturday at Oshkosh. Here the group, strengthened by the mayors of Oshkosh and Fond du Lac, planned a campaign to seek its order.

Mayor Fargo said that now that the lower valley cities have won their just rights in the lake level matter, they have no intention of sitting back and allowing the raising of the lake level. He said a meeting of the officials of the lower valley cities would be called soon to consider what steps to take to have the war department stand firm on its orders restoring the lake level.

Send Telegrams
The first step in the move to prevent the war department from taking over its recent order was taken yesterday when Mayor T. J. Brown of Oshkosh wired that city's protest to the chief engineer of the war department and to Congressman M. K. Reilly and Senators John J. Blaine and R. M. La Follette.

Setting aside of the order until the flood control survey, recently ordered by congress is completed, is one of the objectives of the movement. Fond du Lac also has joined the protest move.

Mayor Brown said that, if necessary, Oshkosh would go to court to prevent raising the lake level. He added, however, that he believed the findings of the flood control committee would be enough to nullify any raise in the lake level.

The telegram sent by the mayor to the chief engineer of the war department said: "The city of Oshkosh protests against order of war department raising water level to 21 inches above crest of Menasha dam. Will appreciate your holding this order until the flood survey authorized by congress is completed."

The messages dispatched to Congressmen Reilly and the two Wisconsin senators contained the same information, but concluded with the statement that Oshkosh will appreciate their influence to have the war department order held up.

"Our interest in the water level is strictly a matter of municipal concern. We are not fighting the battle of the riparian cities. Although this instance their case is almost identical to ours."

To Protect Residents
"Oshkosh must protest an increase in the lake level, to protect the residents here. We must fight to prevent the order from becoming effective, as a higher lake level will disrupt the Oshkosh sewer system, and probably cause thousands of dollars in damage."

"During periods of drought, such as we had last summer and most of this winter, perhaps a higher lake level would mean no difference, but drought conditions will not last forever."

"There will be a time when conditions will be the opposite. Then the Oshkosh sewer system will not be able to handle the high water situation, and the mud and muck will back up into cellars of homes here."

"We must act now to prevent such a condition for Oshkosh. Our sewer system is built dependent upon the 15-inch level of the lake."

MERCHANTS PICK TENTATIVE DATES FOR CO-OP EVENTS

Seasonal "Openings" and Dollar Day Sales Scheduled for 1931

Cooperative events for Appleton merchants during the coming year were discussed and tentative dates set at a meeting of the chamber of commerce retail division in the chamber offices Monday morning.

The annual spring opening will be held on March 12, 13 and 14, it was decided. The first "Dollar Day" sale is to be held on Aug. 13, and the fall opening has been tentatively set for Sept. 17, 18 and 19. The 1931 Christmas opening probably will be held on Nov. 28, it was announced.

The following committee was appointed to make arrangements for 1931 cooperative events: John Mullen, chairman; Wayne Jones, Raymond Eichelberger, Herbert Goldberg, George Dame and Julius Koppli.

The division also discussed proposed city ordinances which seek to abolish temporary signs on business establishments. John Weiland, building inspector reviewed the subject, and a communication from the Appleton Advertising club was read. The advertising club discussed the problem at its recent meeting, and voiced opposition to the creation of temporary signs, it was reported.

A committee was appointed to study the problem and to attend hearings on the ordinance. The committee is composed of Chris Mullen, chairman, George Johnson, and John Neller.

UNCERTAIN WEATHER ON MENU WEDNESDAY

Uncertain weather will prevail in this vicinity during the next 24 hours, according to the weatherman.

A moderate cold wave is due to sweep over this section of the state Tuesday night, and the mercury will probably drop to sub-zero regions by Wednesday morning.

Skies will be cloudy Tuesday night and snow flurries are probable, but fair weather will probably prevail Wednesday.

Snow was reported over the mid-west Tuesday, but fair weather prevailed in the upper lake regions. Winds are shifting in the west and northwest.

At 6 o'clock Tuesday morning the mercury registered 13 degrees above zero, while at noon it registered 13 degrees.

He pointed out that he did not believe the city would take a stand in the matter either way because raising the level would benefit some residents, but at the same time it would cause damage to citizens in other sections of the city.

"We have a bad situation when the water is low," the mayor said. "Hundreds of complaints are received about the bad odors arising from the stagnant pools of water in the lower part of the city. No doubt, raising of the lake level would benefit this group. However, if the water is raised too high and permitted to stay at a high level, it would cause damage to other residents."

STATE TAXES ON RADIO SETS ARE FOUND ILLEGAL

Ruling Is Made in Federal District Court for South Carolina

BY ROBERT MACK
Copyright 1931, By Cons. Press
Washington—(CFA)—Radio listeners need no longer worry about the threat that they might have to pay taxes on their receiving sets to the state.

Such taxes are unconstitutional and are an interference with interstate commerce, it is held by the federal district court for South Carolina in nullifying the radio set tax imposed by that state. As it was the first state to assess a tax on this character, the litigation was in the nature of a test case, involving states' rights in such matters. The decision means that states cannot lawfully levy a tax on receiving sets and that radio is subject only to federal regulation.

A number of states have contemplated levying set taxes, but awaited the outcome of the test case. The decision definitely closes the door to such taxation, unless it is reversed by the supreme court.

A federal court in Kentucky several years ago held that states could not levy taxes on radio transmitters, as factors in interstate commerce.

Industry Involved
A complete cross-section of the radio realm was directly involved in the South Carolina litigation. The radio manufacturer, the retailer, the broadcaster and the listener all were plaintiffs in the test suits.

The Radio Manufacturers' association, Station WPT, at Charlotte, a distributor of Charleston, and an individual owner of a receiving set brought the actions against the state of South Carolina and its state officials. Heard by three federal judges, Circuit Judge Parker of North Carolina and District Judges Cochran and Glenn of South Carolina, the issue for the first time was brought before the courts.

An injunction, restraining the collection of the radio tax from the 50,000 owners of receiving sets in South Carolina, was granted pending the determination of the case.

The tax levied by the state was $2.50. A set selling for less than $50 was taxable at 50 cents per year; those valued from $50 to $200 at $1.00 per year; from $200 to $500 at $2.00 and those costing more than $500 at $2.50 per year. The average tax was $1.00 per set per year.

Whether the federal government has the right to tax receiving sets is not determined by the decision. Under the constitution, congress has the power to regulate interstate commerce, and there is a basic question of constitutional law involved.

In virtually every other country but the United States and Canada, taxes are levied on receiving sets to defray the cost of maintaining the broadcasting structure. In this country broadcasting is supported entirely by sponsored programs, paid for by advertisers.

FINISH TESTIMONY IN ASSAULT CASE

Expect Proceedings Will Go to Jury Sometime This Afternoon

Testimony in the trial of Walter Kohl, town of Grand Chute, and Otto Noack, Appleton, charged with assault with intent to do great bodily harm, was completed in municipal court before Judge Theodore Berg this morning. Attorneys for the state and defense were not expected to complete their arguments to the jury before this afternoon. The jury probably will retire this afternoon.

Kohl and Noack, who formerly lived on a farm in Grand Chute, are charged with assaulting Louis Peters, another Grand Chute farmer, during an argument over ownership of a swarm of bees last June. Kohl was visiting at the Noack home when the argument started. It was the contention of the state that Kohl struck Peters on the head with a hoe, at the direction of Noack. Peters' skull was fractured and for some time after the incident it was not expected that he would live.

The defense claims Peters tried to attack Kohl and Noack, and that Kohl swung the hoe in self defense as Peters walked into his path.

Since the trial started last Thursday the courtroom has been jammed throughout the day with friends and neighbors of the principals.

Repeal Or No Repeal Issue, Borah Avers

Washington—(P)—Waving aside the Wickham report, Senator Borah said today in a statement the issue was "repeal or no repeal of the eighteenth amendment," and that was up to the people alone.

"I should like to see those opposed to the eighteenth amendment present their alternative and let the people choose between the two propositions in an orderly and proper fashion," said the Idaho Republican, a prohibitionist.

"Every one will admit, I suppose, that some system to deal with the liquor problem we must have. Therefore, if we can have the question of repeal and what those who advocate repeal propose in place of our present plan—then let the people decide."

"The general conclusions of the commission will be very satisfactory for the supporters of the eighteenth amendment."

"The personnel of the commission is very high and I have no doubt they worked out the best report possible. But the fact is that in view of the torpedoing of the report of the commission by the individual views of the members of the commission leaves the report without any force or effect in the ultimate solution of the problem."

"Regardless, therefore, of the merits or demerits of the report under the circumstances which now prevail, the report will soon take its place in the dust on the upper shelf, and the great debate will go forward on repeal or no repeal."

Brookhart said the proposal for a revised amendment sounded to him like "repeal" and was apparently in conflict with other parts of the report. He advocated open hearings by a congressional committee on the question.

La Guardia Wants Action
Representative LaGuardia, Republican, New York, an anti-prohibitionist, asked "Why didn't the commission make a recommendation in keeping with its findings?"

"The report shows," he said, "the impossibility of enforcement and the noble experiment which still is, a failure after 10 years won't be a success after 20...."

"The sections dealing with more rigid enforcement and a further trial are only a sop to the drys for political expediency."

"The recommendation that prescriptions be unlimited is a sop to the wet. The commission would give the dry the law and the wet a drink. It would put a white apron on, and a cocktail shaker in the hands of the physician and make a bar tender out of him—if we are going to have bartenders let's have real bartenders and let the doctors cure the sick."

"The only honest conclusion is that if the eighteenth amendment should be repealed congress should be allowed to regulate. The rest could have been left out."

Senator La Follette, Republican, Wisconsin, an opponent of prohibition, said he was "much encouraged" by the report.

Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia, who introduced the amendment under which the inquiry was made, said the commission has exceeded its authority in considering the eighteenth amendment.

Says Report Goes Too Far
"Wasn't by intent that the commission undertake to discuss the advisability or inadvisability of congress having adopted the eighteenth amendment," Glass said. "It has no right to go into that."

Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World Alliance Against Alcoholism, said "whatever the conviction of the people as a whole may be, every citizen owes it to himself, to the government, and to society to read and consider in all seriousness every part of this report."

Asserting division of public opinion in regard to some of the commission's recommendations is inevitable, Dr. Cherrington said that is especially true of the suggestion that the statutory limitation of the amount of liquor which may be prescribed by physicians and the number of prescriptions which may be issued should be abolished.

In urging that a fixed alcoholic content be established for cider and fruit juices, Cherrington said the commission intended to remedy what may become one of the most difficult phases of prohibition enforcement.

Others commented as follows: Representative Hudson, Republican, Michigan, a supporter of the eighteenth amendment.

"I think it shows remarkably well for the amendment that a body of men of this type with a volume of material and plenty of time at their disposal should not favor repeal."

Senator Caraway, Democrat, Arkansas: "I can tell the president very much against an extra session when he drops this and the world court into this session."

Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana: "What I want to know is where the president stands."

"In view of the fact that the commission itself is divided and the majority are for a revised amendment or submission of the question to the people, I'd be interested to know what recommendations the president is going to make with reference to it. No dry should object to submitting any question to a vote of the people."

Sheppard Approves
Senator Sheppard, Democrat, Texas, one of the leading senate drys, expressed approval of what he called "the substantially dry" recommendations of the commission.

Senator Brookhart, Republican, Iowa, another dry took issue with several of the suggestions by individual commissioners.

"I am delighted with the substantially dry recommendation coming from the commission," Sheppard said. "Especially those against re-

U. S. STEEL HEAD SEES BUSINESS UPWARD TREND

Farrell Thinks Peak of Depression Passed Thirty Days Ago

Chicago—(P)—The pendulum of industrial activity, in the belief of James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel corporation, is swinging back to normal.

The broad shouldered, white-haired head of the two billion dollar steel concern expressed his opinion in an address on "business" before the National Canners and National Wholesale grocers.

Declaring that in his opinion the "peak of the depression passed 30 days ago," the speaker said the time has now come for "greater enterprise in trade—for loosening up business, adding that "we are quite capable of doing much more than was done in 1930."

He opposed wage reductions. "There are some," he said, "who urge a reduction in wages corresponding to the drop in prices. They affect to believe that such a liquidation of labor would hasten a return to normal conditions."

"Apparently those who advocate this solution have not stopped to weigh the implications that, instead of tending to increase consumption of industrial and agricultural products, such wage reductions must inevitably reduce the purchasing power of the wage earner and restrict consumption."

"It is my deliberate judgment that a general reduction of wages in this country would set back the impending recovery by at least two years."

Tariff Talks Useless
Touching on the tariff and international relations, Mr. Farrell said that some of the suggestions made along these lines were as futile as the proposals to lower wages.

"There is much needless talk about high tariff walls," he said. "It has been ringing around the world, especially for the last few years, and most of it is aimed at the United States. It comes to our country in large volume from certain countries in which, as in ours, agriculture produces a surplus above their own needs. Why is it that such countries persist in their demand that we, who have a surplus of our own produce, should add to that surplus by purchasing heavily of the same products from them? Their true problem is to sell their production in markets where it is needed for consumption, not in markets where such surpluses only add to an already serious export problem."

Mr. Farrell also said that there were "certain groups" believing that "our recovery will be retarded until certain factors in the world situation are corrected," but that there "is a larger element who believe that if we will concentrate our activities on the United States and its problems, business here with all its potential possibilities will speed recovery and enlarge opportunity for employment."

EXPLAINS BENEFITS OF CHILD THEATRE

Mrs. F. Theodore Cloak Addresses Parents and Teachers

The advantages of a theatre for children were explained by Mrs. F. Theodore Cloak, who is promoting the organization of such a theatre in Appleton, at a joint meeting of the First Ward and Roosevelt Parent Teachers associations at a meeting at Roosevelt school Monday evening.

As wholesome entertainment, as an educational measure, and as a means of developing discrimination in children, Mrs. Cloak pointed to the theatre for children as one of the most progressive moves in the education of youth. She corrected the impression that children are to be used in the production of plays, explaining that the cast and production staff are to be made up of adults. Plays of especial interest to children which will also appeal to adults are to be presented.

"Young America" was given by a group of college players under the direction of John Clinkosky. The cast included Irving Peters, Howard Anderson, Betty Meyer, John Reere, and Ruel Gile.

The high school band, directed by Prof. E. C. Moore, presented several musical selections. The Roosevelt association were guests of the First Ward group.

EXAMINER ADVISES AGAINST INCREASED RATE IN WISCONSIN

Badger Paper Mills Would Be Hit by Boost in Rate on Waste Paper

(Post-Crescent Washington Bureau)
Washington—Increased freight rates on waste paper and related articles from New Orleans, La., and Mississippi Valley points to the paper mills in Wisconsin, which Wisconsin paper organizations, have been fighting, will not go into effect on Feb. 1, if the Interstate Commerce commission accepts the report proposed by Examiner George M. Curtis.

A number of carriers are seeking to cancel all existing commodity rates to and between points in southern territory on scrap and waste paper and to replace commodity rates with rates based on percentages of the contemporaneous first class rates.

The rate equal to 20 per cent of first class was proposed on shipments to Wisconsin, making an increase of from 4 to 6 cents to a number of Fox river valley and other Wisconsin points.

However, Examiner Curtis, in his report, did not object to the establishment of class rates on waste paper, and stated specifically that, although the proposed schedule was found not justified, the filing of such rates would be without prejudice to the filing of new schedules. He thought the 20 per cent of first class to be reasonable on minimum shipments of 30,000 pounds, but a 17.5 per cent of first class rate reasonable for paper, not in machine compressed bales, and with a minimum of 30,000 pounds.

Effective July 1
The schedules were first to go into effect on July 1, 1930, and then were postponed until February 1, 1931, while the Commission investigated.

A great number of dealers and users of waste paper protested. The Wisconsin Paper and Pulp Manufacturers' Traffic Association argued that waste and scrap paper rates have no value unless transported to paper or board mills, and that to increase rates and costs of transportation on these low-value products would entirely destroy their use by paper manufacturers.

It stated also that the use of waste paper and rags should be encouraged since their use would aid in conservation of forests and forest products.

Interesting statistics on the value of the paper and rags are given in Examiner Curtis' report. About 70 per cent of all the articles considered in this case have values ranging from $5 to $20, the report states.

Salvaging of waste paper was much stimulated shortly after the World war as a conservation policy, but the business depression of the past year has hit this traffic also, according to Curtis.

TOBACCO AND SALT PAY ITALY'S MILITARY BILL

Rome—(P)—Italians spend on salt and tobacco almost exactly what the nation spends on her land and naval forces, or roughly $215,000,000 a year.

The big difference is that the sale of tobacco and salt is a government monopoly, which makes better than three-fourths profit. The treasury gets 77 cents of every dollar.

Profits from tobacco, salt and quinine, also a monopoly, cover almost a sixth of the cost of government.

Children's Clothing, Food Still Needed By Indians

A definite report on the relief work already accomplished among destitute Indians in the town of Onondaga and their future needs was submitted at a meeting at Onondaga Monday night. The Onondaga chapter of the American Red Cross, which is considering plans for aiding the Indians, was represented at the meeting by A. W. Jensen, its secretary.

The clergy of the town was represented by the Rev. Wenberg of the Methodist Episcopal church and the Rev. A. A. Vissers of the Catholic church. P. M. Garvey, town chairman, represented the town and the volunteer relief committee.

Mr. Garvey, who has been distributing the donations solicited by the volunteer committee, was assisted by the Rev. Wenberg and Rev. Vissers. They presented an itemized report showing that more than 200 Indians have received clothing and food supplies of food. There are between 30 and 40 Indian families, averaging from four to five persons to a family, still in need of immediate aid.

the "concurrent enforcement" provision of the constitution if enforcement is to be successful.

It recommends that further and more effective efforts be made to enforce the laws.

VOLSTEAD EXPRESSES VIEWS ON REPORTS OF HOOVER BOARD

Finds Fault With Proposal to Remove Restrictions from Doctors

St. Paul—(P)—Andrew J. Volstead, father of the Prohibition Enforcement act, in a written statement today expressed both satisfaction and disapproval with the Wickham commission's report. His statement follows:

"Most of the recommendations made by the Wickham commission have my cordial approval. After almost two years of study the commission recommends against the sale of light wines and beers and against the so-called government sale or control of liquor. This recommendation I hope will make thinking people hesitate to accept either of these propositions as feasible."

"I am sorry to know that the commission takes up the cudgel against a certain class of doctors who pose as too good to be hampered by any liquor restrictions. The restriction of which complaint is made was written into the supplemental act after it had been demonstrated that the profession had enough scraps to make a farce of the law. Doctors were found whose patients stood in rows like bread lines waiting their turn, while busy clerks were writing the prescriptions as fast as the doctor could sign them. The commission suggests no legislation against that kind of an abuse."

"While the commission recommends against repeal of the prohibition amendment and the prohibition law and asks for more men and means to enforce the present policy, it suggests that if there is to be a repeal the amendment ought to be modified so as to simply give to congress the power to prohibit or to regulate. I can see no point in making this suggestion at this time unless it is to unite the forces in opposition to prohibition upon some concrete policy. I hope it may."

THIRTY BARBERS AT CLOSING BANQUET

Hear Talks by B. J. Rohan, Herb Heilig, and Dallas Moser

The Appleton barbers school was brought to a close with a banquet at Conway hotel Monday evening. Thirty local barbers, who have been taking part in the school during the past months, heard talks by B. J. Rohan, superintendent of schools; Dallas Moser, instructor in barbering; and Herb Heilig, director of Appleton vocational school.

The Place of Education was the topic of Mr. Rohan's address. He pointed out the values of a course in barbering for sons of laborers.

Plans for continuing the barbering schools next year were outlined by Mr. Heilig. The 1931 school will probably get underway next September or October.

Mr. Moser gave a short farewell address, and briefly reviewed the work of the past year.

Life Insurance May Make All The Difference

"Poor child," they were saying, "yes, her father died suddenly a few years ago . . . left them almost penniless . . . plucky little kid and really fine people, too . . ."

But you know the story, and if you're wise, it isn't the sort of thing which anyone can say about you if you're unexpectedly taken away. No matter what happens, YOUR daughter will grow up in that full, happy, normal life which every child needs and deserves.

The merits of life insurance as an investment are clear to nearly everyone. That it guarantees comfort to your family is generally recognized. There are other factors, however, about which you may not know. There are policies which, if taken out while your children are young, will guarantee them a sufficient amount of money to enter college when they reach that age. You can take out insurance policies for your children themselves at remarkably low cost. There is life insurance designed to meet nearly any need.

Standing out above all other thoughts which revolve about life insurance is this: HAVE YOU ENOUGH OF IT?

No one is better able to help you answer this question than your own Appleton life insurance representative. His experience and his understanding of the studies which have been made of the relation between life insurance and income will be invaluable in helping you to fix an amount.

Appleton's outstanding insurance representatives are listed below. Go to them or have one of them call upon you. They must be trustworthy and capable and their companies must be in high standing before they are allowed to serve you under the laws of Wisconsin.

"THE COMMUNIST MENACE"

It is not going to be easy to arouse a fever of resentment hereabouts concerning the communist menace described in the congressional report of the Fish committee because in communities lacking connection with the methods of "direct action" there is a failure to appreciate reverse conditions that may exist elsewhere.

The statement of Congressman Nelson, one of the committee, will more likely strike a responsive chord here: "Communism is making no menacing headway in America, and never will so long as organized labor maintains its present attitude toward American ideals and institutions and so long as the communist movement is made up of men of foreign birth and alien tongue in whose philosophies the American takes little stock."

Communism in the world today is acting the part of a spoiled and mentally unbalanced youngster putting tacks on chairs, tripping ropes before doorways, salt in sugar bowls, annoying and sometimes exasperating, with its thumb to its nose, always destroying and never constructing. But it is one thing to protect the public from a disturbance and quite another to assume that any serious part of the American population will ever embrace tyranny for freedom, fright for reason, the rule of the mentally unbalanced and those bordering on aberration for the sane and reasoned march of human progress.

The old Democratic idea that the best way to expose a sham is to permit its discussion freely and openly is applicable with the necessity for some slight alterations demanded because of the violent as well as unlawful methods employed by communists taking advantage of the lenience of our laws relating to free speech. When the proper majority of our people want communism they certainly can have it, but the communists fight this principle fiercely with the realization that they can never get a majority of the people anywhere, least of all perhaps in Russia, but must depend upon force exactly as that other foe of freedom, the royal dictator, cannot survive without rows of bayonets and parks of artillery.

One recommendation of the Fish committee, that alien communists be deported, or if citizenship has been granted to them that it be cancelled, is clearly just. When a man emigrates to a country that country has the proper right to assume that he comes thither to become a friendly part of its life whatever that be, and not a destroyer of the things it holds dear. If he does not like the form of government he is free to go elsewhere. If he really craves communism, boats still run to Russia. If he wantonly refuses to accept the theory of his adopted country he should not be tolerated. That is only simple justice.

It is the duty of a government always to be alert to evils and to protect its people from disorders but only the hysterically inclined will see any menace of communism, even were we to go through ten times as serious a depression as the present one. The American people are educated. That is a complete answer to communism any place on the face of the earth. It got its start in the most densely ignorant country in the world. That was the sort of soil it had to find.

That Russia, steeped in centuries of mysticism and illiteracy, where ox and crooked stick still till the soil, leeringly denouncing and tyrannically denying God to its millions, flouting honor, declaring the keeping of national promises a worthless part of life, maker of liberty into a shambles and of woman into a mere public breeding machine, can actually pose as capable of teaching the most advanced nation in freedom, education, honor and Christianity, anything about government, cannot be seriously entertained even in those institutions whose inmates with vacant stares speak in a discordant melody "and laugh,—but smile no more."

THE FRENCH GOLD RESERVE

Gold bullion has been piling up in the coffers of France. The Bank of France now holds in its vaults over two billion one hundred forty million dollars of this metal, being surpassed only by the United States in its gold reserve.

This is rather an unusual situation and is due to many causes. France has been one of the last to feel the effect of the world economic depression, and up to this time has been able to maintain a favorable trade balance, her exports being in excess of imports. Also due to the unsettled conditions in the markets of the world, French capital has been withdrawn from foreign investment. Another reason for the amassing of gold in France may be explained by the antiquated arrangements of the French money market, which makes it difficult for the commercial banks to obtain credit by borrowing from the central institution, and so obliges them, when they want cash, to bring home their London or other foreign balances in the form of gold which they turn in to the Bank of France.

The depletion of the gold reserve in other European countries, particularly England, is causing financiers considerable worry. A conference is now taking place between representatives of the French and British treasuries with a view to improving the gold situation in the two countries, but no progress has been made. According to cable reports one of the main reasons for the failure of these two countries to adjust their financial difficulties is because of their different conceptions as to the use of gold. English financiers think of gold as an instrument of business, but the French conceive it more as an instrument of policy.

Natural economic causes for the accumulation of gold in France do not seem to satisfy, however, some financial opinion in its present sensitive and nervous state, and the more sensational view is popular that France is building up a war chest, owing to the strained state of the political atmosphere on the continent of Europe. Mr. Hartley Withers, formerly director of financial inquiries in the British treasury committee, that expectations of war in Europe are prevalent in France, and it is probable these apprehensions may have considerable influence in the policy of France with regard to its gold reserve.

At any rate the French policy in hoarding is entirely at variance with all that has lately been said about the need for a more equitable distribution of gold among the central banks of the world.

Huge gold reserves are not wholly a blessing, for this condition will result in an inflation of prices, an increase in the cost of living, and a decrease in exports. It is ventured to suggest, however, that any material reduction in the gold reserve will be strongly opposed by the French government until such time as the political situation shall have materially changed for the better.

DOC'S FIRST QUERY

When comes my doctor unto me
In story to my pleading,
To give that balm for agony,
Which I am sorely needing,
When he has put his coat away
And made his formal greeting,
He'll look at me and sternly say:
"Well, what have you been eating?"
As like a timid child I rise
To tell my tale of anguish,
How spots are thick before my eyes
As I in fever languish,
He shakes his wise old head and gray
At all that I'm repeating;
Then to the good wife turns to say:
"Well, what have you been eating?"
Is there no other source of pain
Than pie and cake and cheese,
Do I from red roast beef obtain
Whatever my disease is?
Is there no war, in innocence,
Of weary bacilli meeting,
That always he must thus commiserate:
"Well, what have you been eating?"
If to that far off Italy I roam
My doctor goes before me,
And standing at the party door
I find him waiting for me,
I'll wager as I step inside
Where angel wings are beating,
He'll say to me: "And so you've died!
Well, what had you been eating?"

Were you ever in the back seat of a car riding along nicely like this and half-asleep when something went haywire and you started skidding along the road from one side to the other like this and began to wonder when the heck something was going to begin to happen and trees and road markers were shuffling back and forth like a deck of cards and finally, after a few hundred feet of this you finally settled gracefully into the ditch looking upwards at the road and feeling very glad that you've finally landed. . . ooof?

Today's Anniversary

THE GOLD RUSH

On Jan. 20, 1848, settlers in California announced they had discovered gold in an excavation made for the tailrace, in a water-power mill near Coloma.

This discovery caused intense excitement everywhere. Men from all parts of the world rushed by boats and wagons across the prairies to the new gold region. The great body of gold-seekers, "the Argonauts," arrived in 1849 and by the end of the year more than 100,000 persons settled in the district.

The richness of the discovery helped stimulate exploration and development in the far west.

This day also marks the anniversary in history of the purchase of Pottawamscot, R. I., from the Indians in 1657 and the opening in 1846 of the first telegraph line between Philadelphia and New York.

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

HOW A NICE LADY CARES FOR HER DOGS

McGill medical professor recently told physicians in medical convention that

(1) If people would cease using their hands to protect themselves when falling, there would be fewer broken wrists (Colles' fracture) and collar bones (clavicle).

It sounds all right. But wouldn't we have more broken jaws (maxilla) and noses? The professor also said that

(2) A woman often sprains but never fractures her ankle (Pott's fracture) by wearing high heels.

Girls who are ambitious to rise in the world will find this Canadian savant asserted that

(3) Although women suffer plains in the forehead of their feet (Morton's neuralgia or affection, flattening of transverse arch, tight shoe cramp), they escape the curse of flat feet.

This third aphorism seems to rankle one of our readers, who submits a clipping of it with the typed notation: "Not according to Doctor Brady. Can't doctors agree on anything?"

Yes, we can. Here and now I revise, renege and revamp anything I may have said to the effect that high heels cause flat feet. Come to think about it, I fear this doctor may be right—all the bad cases of flat feet I can recollect were in men. I can't recall a single woman suffering from flat feet. But I have treated many young women for pronated feet, or rather girls in their teens, and every doctor in general practice has many such cases to treat.

Pronated feet are feet that roll in or turn in at the ankles, and this condition is familiar enough among young girls who are permitted to wear narrow high heels when they should wear only "spring heels," that is, no heels at all to speak of, for health, gracefulness and normal development.

Every parent that has any sense at all has observed precocious flappers with their French heels and pronated feet. It is a painful condition for the silly child to endure; it is just as painful for the sensible parent to observe. This pronation or sagging in at the ankles is properly regarded as the first functional stage of flatfoot. Only when the deformity becomes permanent, from malformation of the bones and ligaments, is it called anatomical, rigid or incurable flatfoot.

French heels are all right. Every girl over 16 is entitled to a pair in her wardrobe, for heavy dates or full dress occasions. If the girl exercises a fair degree of sense about putting "em on and taking 'em off, they will not harm her feet or her health. But if she gets into the housemaid habit of wearing them habitually, her feet will miserably dogs at the knees, no girl has ever managed to be quite graceful on such stilts.

Walking on your toes (part-foot) tiring it in a bit, is one of the finest exercises to prevent and to cure pronated feet, tired feet, weak feet, and in a degree French heels make you walk on your toes, only this toe-walking is mostly make-believe, for the clatter of such heels loudly proclaims that the walker is not walking on her toes at all.

No question but that very high, very narrow heels, with the narrow toes such footwear invariably has, are responsible for most of the painful cramping (Morton's neuralgia) in the forefoot, which women suffer twenty times as frequently as do men.

A Bystander

In Washington

BY HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington — Usually a senator thinks twice before engaging in a verbal tilt on the floor with George Higgins Moses of New Hampshire. They just don't relish locking horns with him.

He gets away with jibes in debate that few others can. Although his expressions are blunt, rarely do they fail to flash with originality, brightness and wit. At the same time they usually carry conviction.

Just before the Christmas recess Brookhart of Iowa found himself tangled with Moses. The treasury and postoffice department bills were up for consideration. Brookhart asked Moses innocently enough for some totals.

"Well, now, wait just a minute," Moses snapped. "Does the senator wish me to indulge in a lot of arithmetical exercises for his benefit, or will he do them and give me the result?"

"That started it," Brookhart, too, is a fighter, but his methods are far different from those of Moses.

Brookhart Starts It
A moment later Brookhart suggested that the bills not be passed at that time. If action were deferred until February, he said he felt "this iron blood might be reduced to a more human nature."

It was the kind of opening that Moses delights in.

Then I beg the senator from Iowa," said Moses, "to apply his policy of dilution to the agricultural bill, which comes before a committee of which he is a member."

"But I am not a member of the agricultural committee," replied Brookhart.

Moses: "No?"
Brookhart: "No, I'm sorry to say."

Moses: "Since when?"
Brookhart: "I never was."

Moses: "Never?"
Brookhart: "Never."

"Then," said Moses with sarcasm, "that accounts for the senator's interest in agriculture, not being a member of the committee dealing with the subject."

Dreadful Adjectives

Brookhart was pried a-plenty by this time.

"It was not because I did not try," he shot back. "It was because the senator's rule of his body in favor of certain stand-pat reactionary ideas did not want a fellow like me on a committee like the agricultural committee."

"Oh," said Moses, appearing thoroughly shocked, "the senator's adjectives are dreadful!"

And on and on the two wrangled in this manner. These remarks are typical of Moses. He delights to scatter slang and colloquialisms.

Seen And Heard
In New York

BY RICHARD MASSOCK

New York — Tallulah Bankhead's return to her native America is in the manner of triumphal homecoming.

The Alabama girl who became London's most sensational actress comes back, Hollywood bound, with a full grown legend of popularity. In London she was the idol of the gallery girls, who would wait en masse to scamble about her when she left the stage door after her performance.

Over there anything concerning Tallulah is automatically news, like the offhanded falls of the Prince of Wales. So our London observer sends word that Miss Bankhead has sold her house, butler and all, to the Maharajah of Cooh-Behar, an Indian prince. It is a rebuilt garage, at the end of a sort of alleyway, but Tallulah thought it was quite a place, which it probably is.

Old World Melody
Our New Yorker in London also sends another note.

He was strolling past Lincoln's Inn, one of the older domiciles, which figures in Charles Dickens' "Black House." Out of the old building came families strains of music.

He was meditating as he walked, on the old-worldliness of this place, this inn built centuries ago, most of it, and the tune was slow in identifying itself.

It wasn't until the last line of the song that the words came to mind. They were, "I'll never go there any more, and the song of course, was the one that starts, "The Bowery, the Bowery."

Newsreel News
News reporting has been complicated by a competitor in the field recording for the eye and ear, meaning, of course, the newsreel cameras. Reporters now arrive on the scene to find the sound cameras already set up. About the only new angle for them is to tell what goes on between the grunting.

Babe Ruth, for instance, began his annual workout in Arthur McGovern's gymnasium this year in front of the camera and with his stepdaughter, Julia, as his ingenue. In one scene the two were on stationary bicycles. Before they began a race they had to arrange their dailies. The author of their lines was George Herman Ruth, who was also director. Before the pedaling began, he outlined the plot to his leading woman and the technical staff.

"I'll say," he said, "Say, Julia!" "She'll say, 'What?'"

"I'll say: 'After two weeks of this we'll make those six day bike racers look sick!'"

When (pointing to McGovern who was standing ready with a bicycle the pump) he'll pretend to shoot me some juice in the arm and I'll speed up."

After that scene, somebody called

Let Child Kill Own Bad Habits

BY ANGELO PATRI
Some habits that children form might better be left to die of their own weight than encouraged. Not that they are so bad in themselves but that they are not lovely. Their effort on the personality of the child is not the best.

One would not tell a child that chewing gum was a bad habit. It is an unlovely habit and a child who practises it in public loses some of the grace that is his own peculiar charm. If one feels that chewing gum is necessary why not chew in private? A child who sits in a car, a classroom, a parlor steadily chewing is not a pretty sight. Far from it. People grow impatient and finally dislike the child because of his poor manners.

Indulging in little mannerisms does not help a child. Twisting a lock of hair, squirming on one toe, biting the lips, giggling between phrases, closing the eyes when telling a story, jingling things, whistling between the teeth, biting the nails are all familiar habits, none of them bad but all of them harmful to the personality of the child.

Breaking up such a habit is not an easy process. The first thing to do is to get the child to realize the effect his little mannerism is having on other people and so on his growth and persuade him to the ideas that he wants to rid himself of the burden. When he earnestly wishes to change his habit he will succeed. Not soon, but in time. Until he wishes to help himself there is very little anybody else can do.

Then there are little nervous tricks of manner that one must try hard to overcome. You know the nervous child who never allows an older person to finish what he is saying to him but interrupts with, "Oh, yes, I know, I know. It's so and so." As a matter of fact it is NOT so and so at all, but quite another way, but the child is in dread of being found in the wrong and hastens to be right first and last. After a few such experiences the grown-up person gives up and leaves the child to his error. You know, too, the child who always says, "No, thank you," to any proffer of help before the words are well out of the friendly person's mouth. That is usually shyness born of the same fear of being in the wrong and needing help.

Then there is the child who shouts down any suggestion. He, too, is suffering from a lack of nervous control. Instead of scolding him one might quiet him, reassure him, make him feel easy, before attempting to talk to him. All these habits from chewing gum to excess to making scenes of one sort or another are not bad habits, they are unlovely handicaps which an understanding teacher or parent or both, can help the child to overcome. First, by making him conscious of a friendly desire to help. Next, by making the child conscious that he needs help. Then to persuade him that he wants help. After that the child will help himself.

These annoying things that a child would be the better for not doing, are real handicaps to his harmonious growth. Consider their influence and try to discover their origin and make away with them if you can do so.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, inclosing stamped addressed envelope for reply.

SLIM ANKLES ARE STILL AN ATTRACTION

BY ALICIA HART
In these days of glamorous slippers, with their silver bands and rhinestone buckles, a thick saddle, suddenly appearing under a mass of lacy ruffles, is entirely out of the fashion picture.

Ankles aren't a novelty now, but they haven't stopped being an attraction.

So if you want to step along in grace and charm, exercise until you have the perfection you desire, and then keep on, in order to retain it. The five suggested exercises should be performed ten times every morning and night, at first, gradually being increased until you can do them one hundred times. Standing erect, with limbs together, and arms extended forward, separate the arms sideways, and inhale through the nose. As you bring the arms back to your first position exhale through the mouth.

Next, stand erect, supporting your hands on the back of a chair, squat to a sitting position, keeping your back straight.

Now stand erect, hands at side, and raise on toes, lifting your arms above your head, inhaling while you raise and exhaling while you return to your first position.

Next exercise, once more, put your limbs together, your hands on your hips, and raise first your right, and then your left leg, sideways up and down.

The next exercise requires the erect position with limbs together again. Standing in one spot, kick backward as far as possible with the heels as though running.

Two mat exercises, which require a recumbent position, are also included. In the first one, bring your knees up to your chest, then lower to the first position.

When that has been done the required number of times, bring limbs up to the chest, and perform a complete circle alternating first your right, and then your left leg, as though you were riding a bicycle.

SCHNEIDER MAY BECOME MEMBER OF FARM GROUP

No Wisconsin Representative on Committee on Agriculture

BY RUBY A. BLACK (Post-Crescent Washington Correspondent)

Washington—Rep. George J. Schneider of Appleton may be chosen as Wisconsin's representative on the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives, if the delegation decides to fight for a place on the committee.

Despite the vast interest of Wisconsin in agriculture, no Wisconsin congressman is on this committee, which handles all dairy legislation and other important farm matters.

If Rep. Edward E. Browne of Waupaca had not been defeated in the primary, he doubtless would have been chosen for the agriculture committee, since he is primarily interested in dairy products. He is next to Rep. Henry Allen Cooper of Racine, the Wisconsin member with the longest term of service, and he is now on the Committee on Foreign Affairs, of which Rep. Cooper is also a member.

As the Committee on Agriculture is a major exclusive committee, it is not considered likely that one of the new members, Gerald Boleau of Wausau and Gardner Withrow of La Crosse, would be chosen, although stranger things have happened.

Rep. Hubert H. Peavy of Washburn might be selected, but there are other matters in which he is more interested. He might choose to remain on his present committee with the hope of becoming chairman of the Indian Affairs or the Census committee, since he has an advantageous place that might sometime result in a chairmanship.

No Rivers Member
On the other hand, Wisconsin likewise has no member on the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and if Rep. Peavy wants a major committee, he might undertake to be appointed to this committee because of the importance of the Superior and Ashland harbors in his district, and the hopes of both towns for further improvements of their ports. Four Republican members of this committee were defeated and will not be in the 72nd Congress, including the chairman, S. Wallace Dempsey of New York. Thus it is a good time to demand a place on this committee if Wisconsin wants it.

Rep. John C. Schafer of Milwaukee might make a try for the Rivers and Harbors committee, too, for although he is a "regular" Republican, he has poor committee assignments.

The only Wisconsin men on major exclusive committees, except the two on Foreign Affairs, are Reps. James A. Frear of Hudson, restored last year to Ways and Means committee, and William H. Stafford of Milwaukee, on Military Affairs committee. Rep. Stafford wanted to be on the Appropriations committee, which ranks with Ways and Means and Rules as the most important committees of the House.

Neither Rep. Schafer nor Rep. Stafford would care for the committee on Agriculture. Rep. John M. Nelson of Madison is chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and would not want to give that up. Rep. Charles A. Kading of Watertown might like the place, but as Rep. Schneider is his senior in service, the Appleton congressman probably would be chosen if he wants it.

Rep. Schneider will have to decide either he prefers to remain on the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization, with the hope of becoming chairman sometime, than to go to the important agriculture committee.

Sixth In Line
Now sixth on the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization, Rep. Schneider might like to hang on until defeats, deaths, resignations and resignations from the committee give him the chairmanship by seniority. This could happen before very long. Right now he is a little weary of the committee because it really acts on very little of the legislation before it and because it acts largely as the chairman, Rep. Albert Johnson of Washington, tells it to act.

The system of legislation in the House makes it important to be chairman of a committee. For one thing, that is practically the only way to get legislation, except private and local bills, passed in a congressman's own name. Even if an idea in a bill introduced by Rep. Schneider on the subject of immigration should be accepted by the committee, he would not receive the present custom get any public credit for it. It would be incorporated in another bill, bearing the chairman's name, or would be simply introduced by the chairman in his name and passed. Legislation of nation-wide scope, almost without exception, bears the name of the chairman of the committee handling it in the House.

If Rep. Schneider should go to the agriculture committee, he would have to relinquish his place on Civil Service committee, where he is now fourth and thus rather close to the chairmanship; on Immigration and Naturalization; and on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, on which he is fourth. The Civil Service and Coinage, Weights, and Measures committees are not of as much interest to the Appleton congressman as Immigration and Naturalization.

The Wisconsin "progressive" Republicans would also like a place on the Banking and Currency committee. Rep. Michael K. Reilly, Fond du Lac, Democrat, is now on this committee.

Two Georgia oak trees, one in Athens and one in Oxford, own their lives, having been thus deeded by former owners for "love and affection."

For Matrons

Attention Matrons! Choose this opportunity to look smart and slender.

You'll love the becomingness of the new softly falling jabot collar that hangs in a long slimming line. The deep vest is decidedly slenderizing and graceful detail. The hip yoke opened at the front creates a slenderizing panel effect at the front of the skirt giving it charming length.

Black canton crepe is stunning for this model with the vest of lace. Style No. 2890 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust.

Wool crepe, marocain crepe and flat crepe particularly in the new prints are lovely for its development. Size 36 requires 4 yards 38-inch to 3 yard 18-inch lace.

Our Large Fashion Magazine shows how to dress up to the minute at very little expense. It contains most attractive Paris designs for adults and children, embroidery, etc. Be sure to fill in the size of the pattern. Send stamps or coin (coin preferred).

MY NEIGHBOR Says—

When frying onions always put a saucepan lid over the top of the frying pan to keep in the steam and flavor. This also makes the onions cook more quickly.

Glass dishes and lamp globes when new should be put in a large pan with cold water to cover them; then place the pan on the stove and let the water very slowly come to a boil. By doing this the glass will last longer and will stand the heat better. China can be treated in the same way.

White kid gloves should be rubbed gently with bread crumbs after each wearing and they will keep clean a long time.

It may save you many failures to know that a fruit cake mixture must be stiff enough for the spoon to stand in it.

Flowers should never be cut in the middle of the day or in bright sunlight, but always in the early morning or late evenings. (Copyright, 1931, by the Associated Newspapers.)

The Story of Sue by MARGERY HALE © 1920 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

"It takes money to hire detectives," Corinne answered Sarah's suggestion. "And I haven't a hundred dollars left in my checking account. Of course, I can sell my car and this coat." She patted the raccoon affectionately. "All my life I've wanted a coat just like this. But I can give it up without a word to show Harry. And then when I've shown him... I'm through, I'll never go back now. But you believe me, don't you, Sarah?"

"Of course I do," Corinne looked very small and very young as she sat in a deep chair and stared at the rainy windows. "But I'll be honest with you, Corinne. I can see how too much circumstantial evidence, too much confusion, suddenly sent Harry away. It isn't really that he doesn't trust you, Corinne. He's baffled."

"But I'm through! If he could accuse me of such a thing do you think I'd ever go back? When this case is settled I'll get a divorce. We're done, Sarah."

"Maybe you are," Sarah answered quietly. "I don't know. But we both need food now. There's a place around the corner with a sixty-five cent dinner. And your bags are in the car, too, aren't they? We'll bring them in first. Corinne, it's so much easier to fight your battles through when somebody is standing by you. But to do it alone... I'll pull out, both of us. And whether you go back to Harry and whether Ted ever comes... that doesn't matter so much. It's fixing our world right that counts."

The bags were brought in. Corinne's dresses and coats were hung in Sarah's wardrobe and her toilet articles were scattered across the dressing table.

"Not even Harry knows where I am," Corinne said suddenly. "He'll have to explain to the servants. He can tell them I'm staying at home. I wonder if he'll worry." She was folding a golden negligee but she sat down on the edge of the bed and stared at the rain-splashed window.

"Corinne, you do love him, don't you?" Sarah asked simply.

"Of course. That's what makes it worse. To be doubted by some one you adore!" Her eyes were stary bright in the shadowy room.

"Then, Corinne, don't you see how he must have felt being deceived thinking he was deceived... by someone whom he loved so much?"

"But he left me! Walked out on me!" Now she was stuffing the filmy golden mass into a drawer. "And I'm through! Through!"

It was rather cold in the two rooms which constituted Sarah's home. The street outside was cheerless and gray, with crowded houses that pushed one another in order to reach the sidewalk to see what was going on. Corinne remembered the wide sweep of blue gray lawn beyond her own house; the rambling homes seemed fixed to the ground as though they hated to leave. There was an air of contentment, happiness, durability about that. But it

WE WOMEN By Virginia Vance

WHO'S WRONG HERE?

Dear Virginia Vance: I should like to know your opinion of the boy I'm going with. I believe that I love him but I cannot be sure since there are so many little things he does which disgust me. To begin with, his family are not as nice as mine and he knows this. I do not particularly like to go to his family's house, but I occasionally go in order to please him. He helps support his people, since his father is crippled. When I have asked my friend to alter certain little mannerisms he has picked up from copying the members of his family he has agreed to try to improve, but never does. And if I keep on pointing out to him his mistakes, he grows offended, and says I do not really love him. He has to work in the evenings very often, and instead of realizing what this means to me he never bothers to apologize, just seems to take it for granted that I will be content to spend evening after evening by myself, without him. And he is very cheap in a great many ways. When we go out, we eat at the cheapest restaurant in town, and go to an old movie at an inexpensive picture house. He never seems to feel there is anything wrong in this, although he knows I'm not used to this kind of entertainment. Once in a while he tells me that I do not love him at all, and then he goes away for several days. But he doesn't seem to care to find out why I appear not to love him. I have tested his love for me several times—breaking dates, telling him flatly I was through and so forth and so on. In each case he has seemed perfectly miserable, and willing to come back on any terms. Mother does not think I ought to waste myself on him when there are other boys who certainly show their love for me, in a different way. I would like your advice.—PATIENCE.

Let's see now, what are this boy's faults? He comes from a less rarified atmosphere than you yourself seem to breathe. He is fond of his people and asks you to go see them. His manners are not above reproach, but he is honestly anxious to correct them—only being a human being he is not fond of nagging little lectures at all hours of the day.

He is careful of his money, which does not seem particularly heinous as a crime, since he has to help support his family. He works hard in hadn't been durable. It, too, "had been swept away. And then she remembered the night that she ran away so eagerly and joyfully to marry Harry Becker. And suddenly she knew that if she could have had Harry again, the house and dress and cars wouldn't have mattered. That he was all that counted in her world. And she decided that she had to prove to him that she was incoherent, though there could be nothing between them ever again.

Sarah had gone into another room. Now she came back.

"Corinne, there's a determined youth who says he has to see you."

"It's Bob, I suppose," Corinne answered, dully. "Tell him I'll be right out."

NEXT: Bob brings news. Copyright, 1931, NEA Service, Inc.

the evenings presumably with an eye to getting ahead in the world, and he assumes because you love him that you understand his reasons for this and are sympathetic. Oh yes, and occasionally when your frequent reproaches sink in too deep, it occurs to him that you don't really love him, and he very wisely goes away.

If you ask me, he's just exactly right about one thing—and that is that you don't love him. So far in your entire letter you have never for one minute considered his point of view—but always your own. Your chief worry in life is whether you're wasting your time being fond of a boy who can't take you to the best movies, who has certain social disadvantages, and who has so many responsibilities to shoulder that he cannot be the gallant boy lover you would have him.

Never once do you consider what his position may be. Never once do you ask yourself whether you're making him happy—whether he is not, perhaps, wasting his love and his trust and his dreams on a girl who is too selfish and superficial ever to know what real love for him means.

Learn a little humility and a little unselfishness. Not until you begin to worry about his happiness, will you show yourself to be really in love. If your mother continues to tell you that you're merely wasting your fresh young beauty on the desert air, give up the boy. For you'll never be happy with him and you'll never make him happy if you accept your mother's opinion—that you're much too good for the likes of him.

But don't imagine that you'll fall disastrously in love with the right man because you'll never find any bliss in love till you've learned to devote some time to the contemplation of yourself—and more to the study of someone else's likes and dislikes.

Kotex is safe

That's why millions of women prefer this modern sanitary pad

BECAUSE Kotex absorbs by a scientific method, it is safer than ordinary sanitary protection. It is soft—not a deceptive softness that soon packs into chafing hardness, but a delicate, lasting softness. That's because it absorbs laterally, giving it a larger area of protection than ordinary pads.

Kotex may be worn on either side, with no possible danger of embarrassment. It is adjustable. You can remove layers of the filler as your needs change. It deodorizes, as you probably know. It gives safe, secure protection. And it is, of course, disposable.

Last year 85% of our great hospitals bought Kotex absorbent in great quantities. What a tribute to its hygienic superiority!

MOVE STARTED TO ELECT BOARD THROUGH VOTERS

Proposed Ordinance Is Introduced to Council by Mrs. Stuart

Neenah—The board of education will be elected by the voters at large if an ordinance introduced at the meeting of the city council last night by Mrs. Helen K. Stuart, first ward alderman, is adopted. Board members now are appointed by the mayor.

The proposed ordinance was referred to the committee on ordinances and printing, and the city attorney. A recommendation will be submitted at the next council meeting.

The pending measure provides for a board of seven members, one-third of the members to be elected annually. In the first election the three candidates receiving the largest number of votes would serve for three years; the next two highest ranking candidates would be elected for two years; and the next two would serve for one year.

Approximately 60 per cent of the cities in the United States now elect their school boards through the voters at large, Mrs. Stuart explained.

An ordinance extending the period for paying taxes to July 1 was unanimously adopted. The ordinance provided that 50 per cent of the amount of real estate taxes only shall be paid by March 1, the remaining 50 per cent to be paid with 2 per cent interest by July 1. A communication from the Neenah Aerie of Eagles, asking that such an ordinance be adopted, was read.

A request from James F. Hawley, post American Legion for use of the city hall auditorium for a meeting place was received. The communication was signed by Otto Lieber, post commander. The request was referred to the committee on parks and public buildings.

Alderman Edmund Aylward, chairman of the committee on fire department, reported that revised plans for remodeling the city hall and for a new building for the fire department would be ready next week, when a special meeting of the council will be called.

Hits Trucking Firms

Alderman Hans Korman moved that the city representatives be asked to draw a law requiring transportation companies doing trucking toward the state to pay something toward upkeep of roads. He pointed out that trucking companies are doing business in competition with railroads but are not paying anything toward road upkeep.

Mayor George Sande approved of the motion. He said a recent survey revealed that the two railroad companies pay to their help in Neenah more than $600,000, most of which is spent in this community by people who live here, while the city derives no revenue from the trucking companies. The motion was adopted unanimously.

Alderman Robert Martin lamented the fact that Neenah is without a theatre. He suggested that steps be taken to encourage reopening of the Embassy theatre or to bring about construction of a new theatre. Alderman Aylward pointed out that the present theatre is old fashioned, and that people would not attend when they can attend up-to-date theatres in cities on both sides of Neenah.

The board of health, through Mrs. Stuart asked that $25 worth of rat poison be purchased and given to people desiring to assist in exterminating rodents in the city. The purchase was left with the city clerk. The board of public works recommended purchase of an air compressor for city departments. The cost would be approximately $2,500. On motion bids will be received for such equipment.

The quarterly report of the city sealer was placed on file.

A communication was received from the city planning commission congratulating the city on adoption of the new zoning ordinance. Permit was granted George Farnakes to sell non-intoxicating liquor at 116 Main-st., recently purchased. The finance committee reported on bills totaling $58,203.49, the greater portion of which were for water construction work. The bills were approved. Alderman Robert Martin reported that school washing is being done by laundries outside of Neenah. The committee on education will investigate. The annual report of the city clerk on the condition of the city's finances at the end of the year showing the city with a surplus of $55,964.04, was presented in printed form and explained by Clerk Zemlock. The council adjourned to Wednesday, Feb. 4.

The victory over Oshkosh and another over their own alumni constitute the squad's notches in the win column so far this season.

With defensive play effective enough to hold the Oshkosh team to only one point in the first half last Friday, Clough will feature offensive rehearsals during this week. In Friday's game the St. Mary forwards had little difficulty in reaching scoring positions but missed a number of short shots under the basket.

Body Found But Mystery Is Unsolved

Remains of Missing Colorado Teacher Taken from Irrigation Ditch

Fort Morgan, Colo. —(AP)—Enid Marriott, 28-year-old school teacher, disappeared from her home more than two months ago. Today her body, recovered from an irrigation ditch, lay in a Fort Morgan mortuary, and authorities professed to know as little about her death as they did when she dropped from sight.

Bits of clothing and personal effects were recovered piecemeal from irrigation canals and the frozen waters gave up their victim yesterday.

L. H. Parker, county coroner, said he found what could be a knife or bullet wound, but he was not sure. Matted with frozen sand, the body guarded its own mystery in the ice that called it. Coroner Parker said he hoped to complete an examination today.

A special investigator, Walter Byron, found the teacher's body, in an irrigation lateral. More than two hours of digging were required to recover it.

Harry E. Moore, a road worker, was under arrest today; but the charge against him—abduction—was described as technical to permit his detention for questioning.

PROBE SHOOTING OF YOUTH IN TEXAS

Father of Girl Killed 20 Days Prior to Second Slaying Is Held

Baumont, Texas —(AP)—The Jefferson-co grand jury set itself today to investigate the killing of Otis Lee Adams, 22, by A. B. Johnson, 20 days following the fatal shooting of the slayer's 16-year-old daughter, Elizabeth.

County Attorney Marvin Scurlock revealed nine persons had been called, including two eye witnesses to the shooting Saturday night and the detective to whom Johnson turned over his pearl-handled revolver.

Johnson, a tall teamster boss at a Port Arthur refinery, had returned to Port Arthur under bond and was not expected to appear, Deputy Sheriff R. J. Shepard said.

Sheriff W. W. Covington said Johnson told him he had a "good reason" for the slaying in that he considered Adams "responsible for my daughter's death."

Johnson's daughter, Elizabeth, died Dec. 28 from a bullet wound inflicted as she sat in a motor car before the Port Arthur First Methodist church. Robert Williams, sophomore in Texas university, who had left her while he went to ask the pastor to intercede in a quarrel the couple had, was freed by a grand jury. Police related he said he believed Adams was the cause of the estrangement.

Appleton-rd. Wednesday evening, W. B. A. Juniors will entertain at a card party in the Memorial building Friday evening.

Ripon And Lawrence Basketball Teams Meet At Alexander Gym

PIONEERS AND BELOIT SHOW AT WAUKESHA

Viking and Crimson Yearlings Will Stage Preliminary at 7:15

THE STANDINGS

Team	W	L	Pct.
Carroll	1	0	1.000
Ripon	1	0	1.000
Lawrence	1	1	.500
Beloit	0	2	.000

STANDINGS in the Big Four basketball conference are due for a shuffle tonight when Lawrence college quintet battles Ripon college at new Alexander gymnasium and Carroll college meets Beloit at Waukesha. The Pioneers are picked to win but the outcome of the Lawrence-Ripon game is pretty much a tossup.

Lawrence college quintet goes in.

RESERVED SEATS

Seats for the Lawrence-Ripon basketball game tonight at Alexander gymnasium have been reserved. Seats may be secured at the Roach Sport Shop until 5:30. Persons wanting choice seats have been asked to come early.

Bus service to Alexander gym tonight will start at 7:15 with busses running every 15 minutes until 8 o'clock. Busses will leave College Ave. and Oneida St. and go east on the avenue and over John St. bridge.

to action for the first time since meeting Beloit in the 1931 opener. The Blue and White failed to show well again the Gold but supporters of the Vikings claim that was because Beloit failed to show good enough to give Lawrence a real battle. The count in that game was 13 and 12.

Ripon college, under the direction of Donald "Red" Martin for the first time has also played Beloit defeating the downstarts with both teams chalking up higher scores than registered here. Ripon also has met and defeated Knox college five.

Martin has an array of veteran basket tappers to shove against Lawrence, among them Glenn Johnson, center, who last year went into a battle against Lawrence at Ripon and tossed the leather so accurately he singlehandedly defeated the Vikings. He has been accounting for more than his share of baskets in recent games and will bear plenty of watching tonight.

"Cenny" Falconer, Milwaukee youth, who also played great basketball last year, is back on the squad and takes particular delight in being Lawrence's other member of the Crimson squad are Christ, Murray, Klagge, Jensen, Meyer and Steinman, several of whom are veteran performers.

Coach Denney of Lawrence also has veterans to pit against the Crimson but the team has not shown as well as he'd like. The vets are Schneller who is closing his collegiate career this month, Biggers, forward and Paul, guard. The sophomores who will get action are Raloff, center, Vanderbloemen, guard, Hall, forward, Gochauer, guard, and Felt, forward.

The game between the two varsity fives will start at about 8:15, according to plans. Lawrence and Ripon freshmen teams will feature in the curtain raiser, the game being the first for Lawrence yearlings on the home court. The Fresh are under direction of Coach Elmer Tangen.

The second Big Four game tonight, the Beloit-Carroll game at Waukesha appears to be another Carroll college win, and a perfect record for the season in the conference. The Pioneer combination of Hinkley and Vanderjulen has proved too tough for other Big Four teams and indications are the Pioneers will gallop through the season to another championship.

The Carroll and Beloit frosh are playing the preliminary. Three former Fox river valley stars, Konz, Kennedy and Tolzman of Fond du Lac are on the Pioneer frosh squad.

GOPHER QUINT BEATS BADGERS IN BIG 10 GAME

Lead Shifts Six Times; Late Rally Enables Minnesotans to Win

BIG TEN STANDINGS

Team	W	L	Pct.
Northwestern	3	0	1.000
Chicago	2	0	1.000
Indiana	3	1	.750
Ohio State	2	1	.667
Minnesota	2	1	.667

Michigan	2	3	.400
Purdue	1	2	.333
Iowa	1	3	.250
Illinois	0	4	.000

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—Despite the fact that the Wisconsin Badgers were forced to accept a 28 to 26 setback from a smooth-working University of Minnesota basketball team here Monday night, it will be one hard task convincing local floor fans that the Minn. team will not have much to say about the dispensation of the Big Ten title from now on.

It marked the third defeat in five starts for the Badgers, and the second triumph in three attempts for the Gophers, who will go to Wisconsin later in the season knowing of more pleasant tasks to perform than defeating those battling Badgers in their home bailiwick.

Badgers Miss Shots

Those Badgers may be small and they may not be given much consideration this year, but sticks of dynamite are not so large, and that's what the Badgers were here. They were more attentive to the Gophers in a guarding way than an unwanted mother-in-law, and it was only through the misfortune of some baskets which came close but not quite that the Badgers are be-wailing another loss.

The Gophers started out as though they would romp to a score of sizeable proportion, but they didn't. After running up a 4 point margin, those Badgers set to work to cut down that lead, and cut it down they did. Overtaking the flying Gophers and then running in front at 10 to 7, the Badgers broke for a minute, but left the floor with the score tied at 10 all.

Lead Shifts Six Times

Returning to the court, the Badgers started the scoring, but it was destined to be a horse race. Six times the lead changed hands, twice the score was tied, and before it was all over there was plenty of ammunition for nervous prostration in a big way.

The Gophers, holding a slight lead, decided to stall in the fading moments of the game, but the Badgers would have none of it. They rushed down the floor to break up the stall, succeeded, scored some more points, and so it went to the end. But the Gophers seemed to have the final punch, pulling ahead at 23 to 26 with a minute to go, and left on that margin to the close.

There may have been greater all-around games played on the field house floor than that with Captain Chmielewski the author, but it is doubtful. He was just all over, and any one who can hold Earl Loose, leading scorer of the Gophers, to one goal from the field is doing things. It must have been a great night for captains at that, for it rested with Capt. Harry Schoening of the Gophers to lead the Maroon and Gold standard, and he did it with 11 points on four baskets and three free throws.

HANSON LOSES AFTER SIX MONTHS' IDLENESS

Chicago—(AP)—Hanson Hansen, the Norwegian middleweight, is looking for the one who wrote the ditty:

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

Hansen worked too much in the ring so about six months ago he decided to play for awhile. He came back last night and took a beating from Joe Sharkey, a fair middleweight from Albion, Mich., after eight rounds. Sharkey, outweighed almost ten pounds, won easily.

MAX SCHMELING TO TOUR UNITED STATES

Dates for Extensive Barnstorming Trip Announced by Handlers

New York —(AP)—An eleven weeks' exhibition boxing tour of the south, southwest and middle west has been arranged for Max Schmeling to put the heavyweight champion in first-rate condition for his title bout with W. L. (Young) Stribling of Macon, Ga., sometime in June, somewhere in the mid-west.

Dates for the extensive barnstorming trip were announced today by Schmeling's handlers. In most of the cities, Schmeling will box exhibitions with sparring partners in conjunction with regularly scheduled fight shows. In others, particularly in Texas, the Teuton pugilist will make personal appearances and act as referee at wrestling matches.

In addition to his appearance in this country, the champion will make a hurried trip to Havana where he is booked for one exhibition.

WOLVERINES LOSE TO FOND DU LAC QUINT

The Wolverines basketball team of the Old Doer league at the Y. M. C. A. lost a thrilling battle to the strong senior Hi-Y team of Fond du Lac Saturday, 13 and 6. The score at half time was 6 and 2 for the Hi-Y, Shannon getting the only Appleton counter.

In the last half the Appleton flc resorted to long range shots, Sanders and Ebert scoring just before the game ended. Boys who made the trip to Fondy were Capt. Starks, Ebert, Sanders, Emerson, Shannon, Steffen, Rossmessel, Dean, Callahan and Gainer. The team is looking for games with teams whose members are from 15 to 17 years of age. Robert Starks, is captain. His telephone number is 4205.

BUDRUNAS' SHOTS HELP M. U. BEAT CREIGHTON

Milwaukee —(AP)—Creighton University's Bluejays pecked away at Marquette University's basket from a distance last night, but Budrunas came through with three of his characteristic one handed loops in the second half and Marquette won, 22 to 18.

The Hilltop, with Budrunas on the bench, held an 8 to 7 lead at the end of the first half.

Short Sports

The New York Yankee ball club, which finished third last year, played to 1,500,000 fans in home games.

Frank Ball, pro at Bobby Jones' home golf course, set a new record of 66 or five less than par over the greens.

A case of "poison ivy" kept Lightning "Charley" Cooper from playing in the $10,000 Los Angeles open this year. The golf pro won the event in 1926.

John Nesbitt, of Fort Smith, Ark., has a pair of horseshoes which won first prize at the state fair in 1929. He made them.

Davenport, Ia.—Kid Leonard, Grovins, Ill., outpointed Dave Grovins, Columbus, O., (6).

Dempsey Looks Good In Gymnasium Workout

BY EDWARD J. NEIL Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK—(AP)—Possibly it means something—very probably it doesn't—but old John no Dempsey is helping himself to daily workouts at the gymnasium of Artie McGovern, muscle moulder to the princes of the sports realm.

He stalked into the foundry of the McGovern yesterday for the first time in months, accompanied by the ever-reliable Gus Wilson, the French trainer and companion he acquired by knocking Georges Carpentier loose from his entourage that overcast July afternoon to Boyles Thirty Acres, back in 1921.

He had asked that the deepest secrecy surround his visits and the surprise was mutual when he collided with a reporter, a fellow warrior against the threat of encroaching flesh, in the boxing booths that adjoin the gymnasium. Jack had his own boxing shoes and his gym clothes tucked under his arm. He looked ready for a fight of a frolic.

"Hey kid," he yelled. "Let's get going."

He wouldn't admit that his presence there meant anything as far as the fight game was concerned. He needed exercise, he said, pointing out that he wasn't alone in that respect. Fight plans? He had none.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

Baltimore—Mickey Walker, world middleweight champion, knocked out Herman Weiner, Baltimore (1): non-title.

Chicago—Joe Sharkey, Albion, Mich., outpointed Haakon Hansen, Norway (8); Harry Dillon, Winnipeg, stopped Al Wilkins, Niles, Mich., (6).

Toronto, Ont.—Billy Townsend, Vancouver, knocked out Jackie Horner, St. Louis, (1).

Springfield, Mo.—Hubert Stribling, Macon, Ga., outpointed Roy Stevens, Springfield, Mo., (10).

Minneapolis—Britt Germa, Minneapolis, outpointed Ernie Peters, Chicago (10).

Siox Falls, S. D.—Johnny Martin, Larchwood, Ia., outpointed Jimmy Wilson, Watertown, S. D., (10).

Major Leagues Looking For Couple Good Catchers

BY JOHN B. FOSTER Copyright 1931

NEW YORK —(CNA)—Some major league teams are still looking around for promising young catchers, and there probably will be a crop of rookies tried out behind the bat when the spring training season gets under way.

Big league managers are aware that their outfits have suffered from a shortage of skilled catchers quite as much as from a lack of durable pitchers. In explaining the rise of free batting, too much stress has been put at times on the weaknesses of pitchers in those clubs that are not equipped with catchers of better than ordinary skill.

The best young catchers in the National league last season were Lopez of Brooklyn and Marcusso of St. Louis. While the world series was being played in 1930, Connie Mack took occasion to praise Marcusso. He said more in private in praise of him than he did in public. "I would consider myself very fortunate if I had a young catcher like him to assist Cochrane," said Mack. "This St. Louis boy has the right idea about catching."

Of the other men behind the bat, Gabby Hartnett of Chicago easily was the best in 1930 and for that matter was easily the best of either the young or old catchers in both leagues.

Cincinnati has faith in Sukerforth, one of the younger catchers of that team, but in general the Reds are not as strong behind the bat as they have been in other days. Dan Howley is scouting for a catcher. He has faith in his pitching staff, which he believes will work much better with a thump man behind the bat.

Of the younger catchers of the American league, Desautels of Detroit impressed baseball men by his spirit and skill in 1930 and he is not a promising failure, with a high rating. The American league has not recruited any young catcher of marked skill since the Yankees obtained the services of Bill Dickey, and he had a bad season in 1930.

CHAFF 'N CHATTER

By Gordon R. McIntyre

William Rohan, Kaukauna, and Wayland Becker, East Green Bay. Becker was a jump shot of a sensation at M. C. this fall.

Possibility of Jack Dempsey staging a comeback isn't so remote. The old Manassa mauler stepped into Artie McGovern's gym the other afternoon down New York way, and dashed through a short bag workout, some real training for the legs and then took to a steam bath. He weighed about eight pounds more than good fighting trim. Not bad for an old timer.

If Jack has any intention of returning to the ring he certainly is starting a fine lot of bally-hoo as the first step. Recently Dempsey and Jack Sharkey have been hurling enough challenges to start a new world war. That's the way these heavyweight bouts start—bully-hoo and more bully-hoo.

HERBIE Thompson, New London, is supposed to be booked with Tony Bruno, Milwaukee, for a bout in February at Sheboygan. If they meet it will be about the fourth or fifth time and someone will yell, "Why don't you go on a vaudeville circuit." Personally we think Herbie should forget Bruno for a couple months; the more he meets Bruno the more chance the Milwaukeean has of beating him. Bruno's handlers won't let their man take a trimming every time. They're too wise.

Appleton fans who went down to Fond du Lac last week and saw Herbie and Tony reported Herbie didn't look so good. Their opinion was that the youngster has been fighting too often and that he needs a good rest. How about it Herbie?

A mid'le west educator recently condemned emphasis on football because of spring workouts. Instead he suggested starting two weeks earlier in the fall. Now what kind of reasoning do you call that? Two weeks' early practice in the fall will accomplish as much as three weeks' of ordinary workouts in the spring. When the boys don't feel like working very hard. Nod-empnas there.

"There's going to be a greenskeeper's school at Madison sometime in February. Too bad they can't hold greenskeeper's schools for some of the dubs who cut up the grass on local golf courses. It would do much more good."

Had a letter from Eddie Kotal the other day in which he wanted to be remembered to the folks around Appleton and especially to some of his golf-fish—of which we are one. Said he liked his job at Stevens Point first rate. But that was before he took a trimming from Stout Friday night.

WILDCATS BREAK MICHIGAN JINX; SCORE, 26 TO 21

Joe Reiff Gets Six Goals as Northwestern Remains Undefeated

CHICAGO —(AP)—Northwestern's hopes of a Big Ten basketball championship team flamed to a new high peak today while those of Wisconsin, Michigan and Iowa flickered and died.

Shattering a 12-year old jinx in the course of their rapid stride toward the title, the Wildcats forged to the front in the race last night at Ann Arbor by defeating Michigan, 26 to 21, after a hard fight. The victory, Northwestern's first on Michigan floor since 1919, gave the Wildcats a one-game edge over Chicago, the only other undefeated team in the conference.

It was Northwestern's third straight triumph. Chicago won its first two games.

Joe Reiff was the spark plug that carried Northwestern to its second five-point victory of the season over Michigan. The big Northwestern sophomore forward rushed in with six field goals and three free throws for 15 points, out-scoring Michigan's ace, Norman Daniels, who tallied 11 points. With the score knotted at 21 points and eight minutes to play, Reiff and his mates held Michigan without a point while they added five. The defeat virtually eliminated Michigan from the race as it was their third in five games.

Wisconsin, one of the perennial championship threats, also joined Michigan's class by taking a whipping from Minnesota, 23 to 26, last night at Minneapolis. The game was close all the way, but the husky Gophers jumped into the lead during the second half and successfully repelled a desperate Wisconsin rally. It was Minnesota's second victory in three games and Wisconsin's third defeat in five. Captain Harry Schoening scored 11 points for the Gophers while Captain John Paul and Douglas Nelson looped nine and eight, respectively, for the Badgers.

Indiana took third place by defeating Iowa, 23 to 20 in a see-saw battle at Iowa City. The Hoosiers won the game in the final five minutes of play, breaking a 19 to 19 deadlock and drawing away with a fine display offense and defense.

Bernard Dickey led the Hoosiers with nine points while Mort Koser flipped in eight for the Iowans. The defeat shoved Iowa within a game of the Big Ten cellar with three defeats and but one victory.

The race will stand still until Saturday night when Ohio State invades Northwestern. Michigan meets Chicago and Illinois tackles Wisconsin.

CHAFF 'N CHATTER

By Gordon R. McIntyre

William Rohan, Kaukauna, and Wayland Becker, East Green Bay. Becker was a jump shot of a sensation at M. C. this fall.

Possibility of Jack Dempsey staging a comeback isn't so remote. The old Manassa mauler stepped into Artie McGovern's gym the other afternoon down New York way, and dashed through a short bag workout, some real training for the legs and then took to a steam bath. He weighed about eight pounds more than good fighting trim. Not bad for an old timer.

If Jack has any intention of returning to the ring he certainly is starting a fine lot of bally-hoo as the first step. Recently Dempsey and Jack Sharkey have been hurling enough challenges to start a new world war. That's the way these heavyweight bouts start—bully-hoo and more bully-hoo.

HERBIE Thompson, New London, is supposed to be booked with Tony Bruno, Milwaukee, for a bout in February at Sheboygan. If they meet it will be about the fourth or fifth time and someone will yell, "Why don't you go on a vaudeville circuit." Personally we think Herbie should forget Bruno for a couple months; the more he meets Bruno the more chance the Milwaukeean has of beating him. Bruno's handlers won't let their man take a trimming every time. They're too wise.

Appleton fans who went down to Fond du Lac last week and saw Herbie and Tony reported Herbie didn't look so good. Their opinion was that the youngster has been fighting too often and that he needs a good rest. How about it Herbie?

A mid'le west educator recently condemned emphasis on football because of spring workouts. Instead he suggested starting two weeks earlier in the fall. Now what kind of reasoning do you call that? Two weeks' early practice in the fall will accomplish as much as three weeks' of ordinary workouts in the spring. When the boys don't feel like working very hard. Nod-empnas there.

"There's going to be a greenskeeper's school at Madison sometime in February. Too bad they can't hold greenskeeper's schools for some of the dubs who cut up the grass on local golf courses. It would do much more good."

Had a letter from Eddie Kotal the other day in which he wanted to be remembered to the folks around Appleton and especially to some of his golf-fish—of which we are one. Said he liked his job at Stevens Point first rate. But that was before he took a trimming from Stout Friday night.

LAYTON BEATEN AT BILLIARD TOURNEY

Frank Scoville, Buffalo, Defeats Champ 50 to 35 in 15 Innings

Chicago —(AP)—Frank Scoville of Buffalo waited 30 years to make his debut in a world's championship billiard tournament and then he upset one of the strongest champions the three-cushion field ever knew.

Scoville last night defeated Johnny Layton, champion of all three-cushion stars for three years straight, in the first match of the 1931 tournament by a score of 50 to 35 in 15 innings.

The Buffalo challenger, who won the right to compete by capturing the eastern sectional championship, entered the match labelled as an east mark for the Sedalia, Mo., ace. But instead of showing signs of nervousness, he stroked even with the champion for the first 15 innings, dropped behind momentarily and then breezed ahead and stayed there. He executed shots with great accuracy and left the champion but few easy shots. His high run for the match was six white Layton's best cluster totaled three.

Oakland, Cal.—Speedy Dado, Manila, knocked out Jackie Evans, Kansas City (2).

Six Commissioners Suggest Revision of 18th Amendment

GIVE CONGRESS MORE LATITUDE IN MAKING LAWS

Would Set Up Commission to Regulate Sale and Manufacture of Liquor

Washington—(AP)—Here is the gist of the plan for modification of the prohibition amendment proposed by Henry W. Anderson, and recommended by the Law Enforcement Commissioners Kenyon, Loesch, Mackintosh, McCormick and Pound:

"It is proposed that as soon as practicable, by appropriate action of congress and of the states, the eighteenth amendment be modified or revised . . . as follows:

"The congress shall have power to regulate or to prohibit the manufacture, traffic in or transportation of intoxicating liquors within the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof, for beverage purposes."

"This modification would bring the amendment into conformity with the traditional principles of our system of government. By conferring power upon congress it would give to the amendment the necessary flexibility. The power to prohibit should be given to the end that if the proposed modification is adopted the national prohibition act would continue in force thereunder until congress enacted some other plan, thus avoiding any break in the system of control and preventing the restoration of the saloon anywhere in the United States."

Need Flexibility
"Under the proposed amendment as modified, congress would have full power (1) to continue the present system of absolute national prohibition, or (2) to remit the matter in whole or in part to the states, or (3) to adopt any system of effective control. Since greater flexibility is one of the outstanding needs of the present system, this modification should be made even if the policy of absolute national prohibition is to be continued."

"The congress should then create a bipartisan national commission on liquor control, which should have full power under such laws as congress might enact to regulate and control the manufacture, importation, transportation in interstate commerce, and also the sale, as and to the extent hereinafter stated, of intoxicating liquors of more than one-half of one percentum alcoholic content, for beverage purposes, and to exercise similar regulation and control over alcoholic liquors for other purposes effective."

"The powers of the commission as to the regulation and control of the traffic indicated and of the agencies created for the purposes thereof should be fully as complete as those of the Interstate Commerce Commission over railroads and should in every respect be adequate for the purposes of the plan."

Form Corporations
"That congress should create a national corporation for the purposes of the plan, all of the stock of which should be privately owned, or in its discretion a number of such corporations, such as one for each judicial circuit."

"It should be vested with the exclusive right and power to be exercised under the control and regulations of the national commission) of manufacture, importation, exportation and transportation in interstate commerce, and of sale as and to the extent hereinafter stated, of all alcoholic liquors for beverage, as well as for medicinal and sacramental purposes in, within or from the territory of the United States or subject to the jurisdiction thereof."

"The financial plan of the corporation to be fixed in its charter and in operation subject to the control of the commission, should provide for an issue of stock of only one class to be sold at par, to be entitled to cumulative dividends limited to such rate upon the actual capital invested as might be determined by congress, or with its authority by the commission. A rate of not less than 5 per cent nor more than 7 per cent is suggested."

"The corporation should be permitted to retain from its earnings not exceeding 2 per cent per annum on its invested capital."

"It should be required by law that alcoholic liquors for beverage, medicinal or sacramental purposes of over one-half of one per cent alcoholic content by volume (not including industrial alcohol) might be manufactured, imported, exported, transported in interstate commerce, or sold, solely by the national corporation, or its branches."

"The commission should have power to prescribe the alcoholic content of the various kinds and grades of liquors."

"All alcoholic liquors so acquired or produced should be promptly placed in bonded warehouses of the corporation."

"The corporation should only be allowed to make sale and shipment of such liquors in any state to a corporate agency created by such state, similar in general character to the national corporation, for the purpose of the purchase and distribution and local sale of such liquors within the state and to the extent permitted by the laws thereof."

"If the state at its option elected not to adopt the system it could establish or continue prohibition, in which event it would have to enforce its own laws within the state, but the federal law would not permit sales or shipments into that state by the national corporation except through the state if bonded. Every aspect of the operations outlined would be subject to the control and regulation of the commission and appropriate penalties would be prescribed for violations of the law or of such regulations."

"The price at which the various liquors should be sold by the national corporation should be fixed or approved by the commission after hearing in proper cases."

Report Of Hoover Commission Contains Opinions Of Eleven Alert Minds

BY REID MONFORT

Washington—(AP)—Into the report of President Hoover's law enforcement commission, given to the president Monday, have gone opinions of 11 highly individual minds. Ten men and a woman from major geographical divisions of the country brought wide experience and matured outlook to the most extensive investigation ever made into prohibition. They have considered this controversial subject about 20 months.

Chairman of the body is George W. Wickersham, former attorney general of the United States, whose 72 years have been crowded with activity. A tireless worker of mind, he has carved his niche in national and international affairs before President Hoover selected him for his present post.

Direct and dynamic, he has a reputation of going to the core of a problem. The tempo of his activity is fast. His apparently boundless energy is the wonder and admiration of his associates.

Pittsburgh born, educated at Harvard and Lehigh universities, he has practiced law in Philadelphia and New York.

"Brief in stature but long in law" is how a friend described Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war who has plucked numerous laurels in the legal field. Of firm convictions, Baker stoutly defends his opinions with a tongue remarkably persuasive.

His facility of expression, poise and keen mind are quickly noted by acquaintances. Friends say he has the knack of winning his way without "obnoxious aggressiveness."

A native of West Virginia, he went to Ohio as a young man to follow his profession. He was educated at Johns Hopkins and Washington and Lee universities.

"I am not and never have been a prohibitionist," Baker once wrote in a derogatory manner.

The president of Radcliffe college since 1923, Miss Ada L. Comstock, the only woman member of the commission, has been an outspoken advocate of tolerance during her long career as a leader of young women and as an educator.

A defender of modern girls, she has said that the young women of today are as capable, honest and moral as those of any generation in history.

Regarded by other members as "one of the ablest of the group," she has worked diligently on the prohibition report.

She dresses conservatively, preferring quiet colors. Reserved, she is alert and earnest.

Her biography to other readers, and for years has been an enthusiastic walker. She once said her father's interest in literature probably was the most important influence in her life.

Minnesota's her native state, with the University of Minnesota and Smith college her alma mater.

William S. Kenyon, tall and distinguished, has crusaded many years for enactment of his belief in laws. As a senator from Iowa, he was co-author of the Webb-Kenyon act which, before national prohibition, made illegal the shipment of intoxicating liquor from a wet state into another that had adopted local option.

He was one of the insurgent members of the commission who sought concentration on the prohibition problem.

He is m. Affable, with lively humor, Kenyon is a ready conversationalist. Associates term him "incurably optimistic."

Among other posts he has been assistant attorney general of the United States circuit court of appeals.

One of the hardest workers on the commission has been Roscoe Pound, dean of the Harvard law school. This erudite son of Nebraska, who resembles a business man more than a professor, has come speedily back to his post after his twice-a-week lecture at Harvard.

His strong, well-knit body keeps fatigue long at bay, and his buoyant spirit seems never to drop.

H. W. Anderson, dean Pound always has preached dynamic, not static conception of law. He has sympathies for those who would rid government and legal activities of "legalism" and regard for tradition and form.

His hobbies are botany and the study of the military history of the Civil war. He reads Latin and Greek, and his memory, particularly on legal subjects, is prodigious.

In days of old Henry W. Anderson might have carried a shining lance and worn a gay plume.

The crash of spearhead against armor would have been music to his ears. In legal activities he greatly relishes the business of rushing to the attack; he is regarded by friends as a lawyer who will battle the "unconquered" and brilliantly for a cause.

He has a wide reputation as a successful corporation attorney.

Tall, blond, with hair now white, this 60-year-old Virginia lawyer of vigorous physique has a keen, analytical mind. He is an indefatigable worker and considered by associates a profound student and convincing speaker.

Although a bachelor Anderson maintains a large home which contains one of the best private libraries in Richmond. He often entertains friends. The term him an engaging host.

He has membership in several exclusive clubs.

Originally a Democrat Anderson became an independent because of his opposition to the free silver movement in 1896. He has been an active Republican since the election of the late William Howard Taft.

Republican nominee for governor of Virginia in 1921 he has been endorsed in the past by the Republican state committee for vice president of the United States.

His activity in Virginia politics has made him a power in the old dominion. He has written his party's platform in Virginia and played a part in drafting Republican national platforms.

member of the Mexican Claims commission.

William I. Grubb, federal judge of the northern district of Alabama, has been called one of the most severe judges in the country with respect to penalties for violation of the prohibition law. His ability is rated high by those who know him.

Very slender, he is below medium height; in manner, quiet and reserved. He is a "good listener," preferring to let the other person do the talking.

Judge Grubb was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, and educated at Yale. He is 68 years old.

At 78, Frank J. Loesch, Chicago lawyer, is the oldest person on the commission. Yet he is another Wickersham when it comes to fast thinking and he also has that same capacity for direct speech. He is genial, bold, and unflinching.

A fearless prosecutor, he launched a campaign against corruption in public office some 20 years ago when he was a special state's attorney. He was active in organization of the body now known as the Chicago crime commission. He has served both as president and vice president of that body. Loesch was born at Buffalo and educated at Northwestern.

He greeted the law enforcement study as a ray of hope after his prosecutions against Chicago election frauds had "blinked out," one by one, in the courts. Then he said "the crime situation generally should be eased" as a result of the national commission's work.

Prohibition, Loesch said, creates only about eight per cent of all law enforcement problems.

By five years, Monte M. Lemann of Louisiana is the youngest member of the commission, whose average age is between 40. This soft-spoken lawyer from New Orleans is always well-dressed, with a flair for becoming colors. Both his bearing and work are distinguished.

Lemann for years has been recognized as a progressive leader of lawyers in his state. Numerous articles dealing with legal subjects have come from his pen. He has fought constantly for rigid law enforcement since he was admitted to the bar in 1907. Associates say he weighs arguments most carefully.

To make a good job of it, Kenneth Mackintosh moved his residence from Tacoma, Wash., so he could be near his new work. He is a rival of Lemann in what the well-dressed lawyer should wear. Distinguished and well poised, he is generally popular.

The universities of Washington, Stanford and Columbia contributed to his education. County prosecuting attorney, superior court judge, associate judge of the supreme court and chief justice have been successive milestones of his progress in his native state of Washington.

Paul J. McCormick, Los Angeles lawyer, is credited by his friends with being a profound student of the social sciences. His disarming, democratic demeanor makes conversation easy.

A federal judge of Southern California since 1924 he has presided over and decided more big cases involving oil frauds. He has served as assistant district attorney of Los Angeles county, judge of the superior court of California and associate justice of the California court of appeals.

His 51 years make him next to the youngest commissioner.

to be disposed of by the legislature of the state.

Washington—(AP)—Here are the individual views of members of the Wickersham commission:

Newton D. Baker, Cleveland, secretary of war in the Wilson cabinet: The full text of Mr. Baker's statement follows:

"In my opinion the eighteenth amendment should be repealed and the whole question of policy and enforcement with regard to intoxicating liquors remitted to the states."

"If, for practical reasons, immediate repeal be thought unattainable, a submission of the amendment to the states for their consideration would test the present sentiment of the country and, if the amendment were adopted, would accomplish the double result of removing an arbitrary and inflexible police regulation from the constitution, where it seems to me it should never have been put, and of giving congress the power to adapt federal legislation to the subject, from time to time, to the realities of the situation as they may develop."

"I have signed the report of the commission because it is a fair finding of the facts disclosed to us by such evidence as was available, and because it is clear that so long as the constitution and law remain as they now are, the recommendations of the report should be carried out to the duty of enforcement."

"The efforts now being made to enforce the law are sincere and intelligent and aided and supplemented, as recommended in the report, a higher degree of effectiveness will be certain to follow, but in my opinion the problem is insoluble so long as it is permitted to require a nationwide federal enforcement of a police regulation, at variance with the settled habits and beliefs of so large a part of our people."

Ada L. Comstock, president of Radcliffe college, Cambridge, Massachusetts. The full text of Miss Comstock's statement follows:

"The material which has been brought before the commission has convinced me that adequate enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and the National Prohibition act is impossible without the support of a much larger proportion of our population than it now commands. Moreover, the conditions which exist today in respect to enforcement and which, in my opinion, can be modified only slightly by improvements in administration, tend to undermine not only respect for law but more fundamental conceptions of personal integrity and decency. For these reasons, I am one of the members of the commission who favor an immediate attempt at change. As I still hope that federal regulation of the liquor traffic may prove more effective than that of the states, I favor revision of the amendment rather than its repeal."

William S. Kenyon of Iowa, judge of the Eighth District United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Judge Kenyon favored a further trial of the dry laws and if they were deemed a failure, a modification of the eighteenth amendment and placing the power in congress to deal fully with the subject.

"In the meantime, the feeling of the people on the subject should be registered on repeal of the eighteenth amendment and the provision by congress that it be ratified by state conventions, to which delegates would be elected."

Judge Kenyon argued that prohibition had never had a fair trial. He said that the enforcement first was in the hands of the treasury, "skilled in finance but not in law enforcement," the part police played before enforcement bureau appointments were put under civil service, and corruption which he said permitted speakeasies to operate and other traffic in liquor.

Public sentiment against the laws had been stimulated. He said, by abuse of search and seizure processes and the entrapment of witnesses. Recent methods, he argued, would tend to alleviate some of this irritation.

In giving his views on the plan for government control advanced by Col. Anderson, Kenyon said it reflected in part the Bratt system of Sweden, and was "based in part on a paternalism which would be rather odious to citizens of this republic."

He urged it be carefully studied, however, if any change is made.

Here Is Commission's Own Summary Of Its Report

Washington—(AP)—The Law Enforcement commission summarized its prohibition report as follows:

"Conclusions and recommendations in the report on the enforcement laws of the United States."

"1. The Commission is opposed to repeal of the Eighteenth amendment."

"2. The Commission is opposed to the restoration in any manner of the legalized saloon."

"3. The Commission is opposed to the federal or state governments, as such, going into the liquor business."

"4. The Commission is opposed to the proposal to modify the national prohibition act so as to permit manufacture and sale of light wines or beer."

"5. The Commission is of opinion that the cooperation of the states is an essential element in the enforcement of the Eighteenth amendment and the national prohibition act throughout the territory of the United States; that the support of public opinion in the several states is necessary in order to insure such cooperation."

"6. The Commission is of opinion that prior to the enactment of the Bureau of Prohibition act, 1927, the agencies for enforcement were badly organized and inadequate; that subsequent to that enactment there has been continued improvement in organization and effort for enforcement."

"7. The Commission is of opinion that there is yet no adequate observance or enforcement."

"8. The Commission is of opinion that the present organization for enforcement is still inadequate."

"9. The Commission is of opinion that the federal appropriations for enforcement of the Eighteenth amendment should be substantially increased and that the vigorous and better organized efforts which have gone on since the Bureau of Prohibition act, 1927, should be furthered by certain improvements in the statutes and in the organization, personnel, and equipment of enforcement, as to give to enforcement the greatest practicable efficiency."

"10. The Commission are not convinced that prohibition under the Eighteenth amendment is unenforceable and believe that a further trial should be made with the help of the recommended improvements, and that if after such trial effective enforcement is not secured there should be a revision of the amendment. Others of the Commission are convinced that it has been demonstrated that prohibition under the Eighteenth amendment is unenforceable and that the amendment should be immediately revised, but recognizing the process of amendment will require some time, they unite in the recommendations of conclusion No. 9 for the improvement of the enforcement agencies."

"11. All the Commission agree that if the amendment is revised it should be made to read substantially as follows:

"Section 1. The Congress shall have power to regulate or to prohibit the manufacture, traffic in or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, and the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes."

"12. The recommendations referred to in conclusion number 9 are:

"(a) Removal of the causes of irritation and resentment on the part of the medical profession by:

"(b) Doing away with the statutory fixing of the amount which may be prescribed and the number of prescriptions;

"(c) Abolition of the requirement of specifying the ailment for which liquor is prescribed upon a blank to go into the public files."

"(d) Leaving as much as possible to regulations rather than fixing details by statute."

"2. Removal of the anomalous provisions in Section 29, National Prohibition act, as to cider and fruit juices by making some uniform provision for a fixed alcoholic content."

"3. Increase of the number of agents, storeroom-gaugers, prohibition investigators and special agents; increase in the personnel of the customs bureau and in the equipment of all enforcement organizations."

"4. Enactment of a statute authorizing regulations permitting access to the premises and records of wholesale and retail dealers so as to make it possible to trace products of specially denatured alcohol to the ultimate consumer."

"5. Enactment of legislation to prohibit independent denaturing plants."

"6. The Commission is opposed to legislation allowing more latitude for federal searches and seizures."

"7. The Commission renews the recommendation obtained in its previous reports for codification of the National Prohibition act and the acts supplemental to and in amendment thereof."

"8. The Commission renews its recommendation of legislation for making procedure in the so-called padlock injunction cases more effective."

"9. The Commission recommends that the present provisions in the federal courts and modifying the increased penalties act of 1929, as set forth in the chairman's letter to the attorney general dated May 23, 1930, H. R. Rep. 1099."

"There are differences of view among the members of the commission as to certain of the conclusions stated and as to some matters included in or omitted from this report. The report is signed subject to individual reservation of the right to express these individual views in separate or supplemental reports to be annexed hereto."

ers and arch criminals can only be destroyed when their bootleg liquor profits are taken from them," he said. "So long as the eighteenth amendment remains in its present rigid form the nation, the states, the municipalities, the individual citizen are helpless to get out of reach of their poisonous breaths and slimy tentacles."

"If not soon crushed these criminal organizations may become as they are now seeking to become super-governments and so beyond the reach of the ordinary processes of law."

George W. Wickersham, chairman of the commission and former attorney general, said: "I have signed the report of the commission although, as is probably inevitable when 11 people of different antecedents and temperaments endeavor to agree upon a contentious subject, it is more or less of a compromise of varying opinions."

"I cannot believe that an experiment of such far-reaching and momentous consequence as this of national prohibition should be abandoned after seven years of such imperfect enforcement and only three years of reorganization and effort to remove the mistakes of the earlier period. The older generation very largely has forgotten and the young never knew the evils of the saloon and the corroding influence upon politics, both local and national, of the organized liquor interests, but the tradition of that rottenness still lingers, even in the minds of the bitterest opponents of the prohibition law, substantially all of whom assert that the licensed saloon must never again be restored."

Chairman for Present Law
"It is because I see no escape from its return in any of the practicable alternatives to prohibition that I unite with my colleagues in agreement that the eighteenth amendment must be repealed and, differing with some of them, I have been forced to conclude that a further trial should be made of the enforceability of the eighteenth amendment under the present organization, with the help of the recommended improvements."

"I think that if a proposed amendment to the constitution simply repealing the eighteenth amendment, and is pressed by the requisite majorities in both houses by congress and submitted to the states, to be considered by conventions called for the purpose in each state, the delegates to be chosen in an off year and the conventions to be held in a year when there is no presidential election, we should have intelligent discussions on the question and a result which would reflect the sober informed and deliberate opinion of the people. Such a procedure might remove the issue from party politics."

Roscoe Pound, dean of Harvard Law school since 1916, said:

"As I interpret the evidence before us, it is established certain definite economic and social gains following national prohibition. But it is established quite as clearly that these gains have come from closing saloons rather than from the more ambitious program of complete and immediate universal total abstinence to be enforced concurrently by national and state. Thus the task is to conserve the gains while finding out how to eliminate the abuses and bad results which have developed in the past decade."

"While making enforcement as effective as we may, so long as the amendment as it remains the supreme law of the land, we should be at work to enable the fundamental difficulties to be reached. This, it seems clear, can only be done by a revision of the amendment. It can be done only by so redrawing the amendment as, on the one hand, to preserve federal control and a check upon bringing back of the saloon anywhere, and, on the other hand, to flow of an effective control adapted to the conditions in places where, as things are at least, it is futile to seek a national enforced general total abstinence."

Must Keep Control

"Federal control of what had become a national traffic, and abolition of the saloon are great steps forward which should be maintained."

"It requires an unwarranted lack of faith in American political ingenuity to assume that no such forms of control may be worked out. Mr. Anderson has proposed a well thought out plan, based on study of systems of liquor control and their operation. His plan deserves careful consideration as to the best and most complete which has been brought to our attention. This or some like plan for adapting national control to local conditions may well be the next forward step."

Henry W. Anderson of Richmond, Va., in urging revision of the eighteenth amendment to permit government control of liquor, said he regretted he could not occur in the view that the existing system be given a further trial.

Mr. Anderson's opinion was the greatest step ever taken in this country looking to control of liquor but that "we are in grave danger of losing all that has been gained."

Can't Control People

The Virginian added that the effort to make all the people total abstainers ran counter to fundamental social and economic principles that "are beyond the control of government."

"The fruitless efforts at enforcement are creating public disgust and not only for this law but for all laws," he said. "Public opinion through the purchase of official protection for this illegal traffic is widespread and notorious."

Anderson said that the enormous revenues, "estimated at from two to three billion dollars per annum," gave criminals weapons which enabled them not only to continue their business but to organize and develop "other lines of criminal activity to an extent which threatens social and economic security."

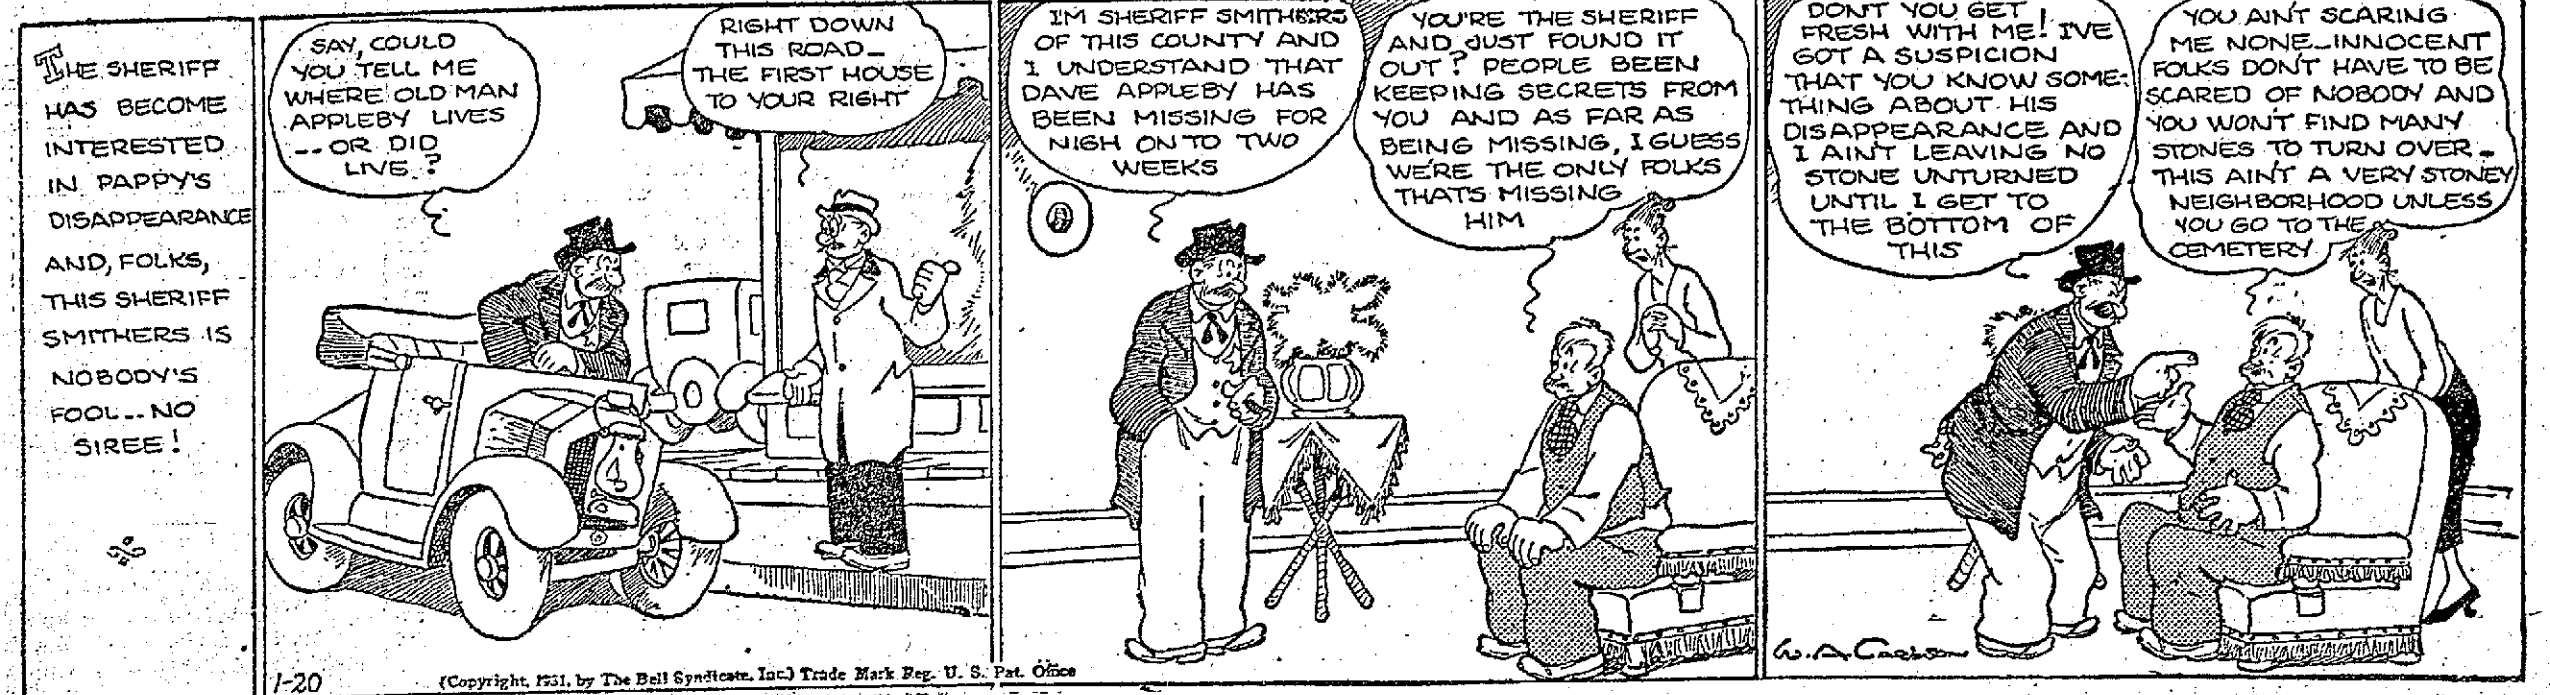

The country is growing restive under the present law.

Chapter 31
A FRUITLESS APPEAL
G ARRETT Wentworth's unstinted sympathy made a difference to Fanny. He came of a family, had a background and a position that even the Brownbecks would respect. He was fine and sane and highly sensitive. And Garrett believed that it was an outrage that Fanny should not see her little daughter.

Now that Fanny was properly lodged and fed and clothed, had work that she liked and was not longer haunted by the spectre of discharge, some of her old impetuosity gradually reawakened.

One night, soon after her talk Garrett, she was so shaken with longing for Sheila that she told herself that she would die if she could not see her soon. She determined then to throw herself on David's mercy. Until the break came David had never been unkind. He was not all Brownbeck; he could see two sides. And surely by this time his anger and resentment would have lessened.

She wrote that night, tearing up half a dozen letters before she was satisfied.

"Dear David," the final letter ran, "I have thought of asking you to see me the next time you come to New York, but I realize a meeting would be too painful to both of us. I gave Sheila to your because I believed she would be better off with you. I still believe that it is for her good that she stay with you. But the need to see her has grown so overwhelming that I feel that I cannot endure the present arrangement. Nor do I honestly believe that it could in any way harm Sheila to spend a few weeks with me every year, during her vacation and mine. I can assure you that there is nothing in my life or environment or friends that you could object to. I plan to take her to the seashore. It hardly seems necessary to point out that a sacred and binding responsibility, like parenthood, seldom works only one way. As Sheila is my responsibility, in lesser measure perhaps, I am hers. Nor do I believe that it would be for her good and all-round development if she were taught to shirk that responsibility altogether.

"Your kindness in the past makes me believe you will grant this greatest of kindnesses. Knowing me as you did, you must have realized a measure of my regret at the suffering which came to you through our unfortunate marriage."

She hesitated, and then signed it simply Fanny. The first envelope she addressed to the bank; then she remembered David's secretary had been with him for years and might recognize her handwriting. So she addressed it to his home, sealed and stamped it and went downstairs at one in the morning and mailed it in a letter box on Fourth-ave.

The next afternoon Leona brought the letter, along with several circulars and bills, upstairs to Mrs. Frost who was dressing to go out. Mrs. Frost examined the mail and sat down.

"Aren't you feeling well?" asked Leona solicitously. "You look kind of peaked."

"No, yes, I'm all right, but I find I have to attend to some business. Have Ben bring the car around at once."

"But you'll be late to Miss Emmeline's party."

"This is more important than any party," said Mrs. Frost unsteadily. Leona had not seen her so agitated in years. Twenty minutes later she was closeted with her Cousin Edward Philbrick.

"But the letter is addressed to David; he certainly never authorized me to open his private correspondence," protested Mr. Philbrick.

"He certainly authorized you to take full charge of his divorce—said very positively that he did not want to be told any of the minor details."

"The case is long since over. If David does not care to hear from his ex-wife he has only to burn the letter or turn it over to me."

"He'd be certain to open it—wouldn't think she was sick or needed money or something like that. But I know she's after Sheila. I knew she would be sooner or later. And I won't have David upset. He's just begun to get over it this last year," since, Mary Morton came home. Her return was a blessing."

Mary Morton and her mother had gone to Europe a few weeks after David's sudden marriage. The war drove them to Southern California where they established themselves. There Mrs. Morton had died about a year after David's divorce. Mary brought her mother's body back to Cloughbarre for burial, opened her old home and remained.

"I thought David rather avoided Mary," said Mr. Philbrick curiously. "He did at first. But I had her to dinner and Mary asked him to call. He did finally. Now he goes regularly. Not often but regularly. And I won't have his affair with Mary interfere with a second time by that woman." Mrs. Frost reached over and picked up the letter. "You don't know what I've gone through the past three years and a half," she said deliberately and deliberately tore open Fanny's letter, settled her eeglasses firmly on her Roman nose and read it through to the end. Mr. Philbrick watched her uncomfortably. He had never been fond of his cousin; now only his strong sense of kinship kept him from actively disliking her.

"It's as I thought," Mrs. Frost announced triumphantly. "She's after Sheila; coolly suggests that Sheila should spend her vacations with her. It's a good thing I opened that letter. There's more here than meets the eye. She gives a strong hint for an interview. You know David's soft streak. If she once got hold of him, broke down and cried—or pretended to—Heaven knows what she might get out of him."

"Mr. Philbrick's family caution took alarm.

"I don't believe David is as soft as you think," he contended stoutly. "David's hardened, naturally since his trouble and poor Judson's death." But he was arguing against his own fears and he agreed to answer the letter on lines laid down by Mrs. Frost.

"David Frost regrets," Mr. Philbrick wrote Fanny, "that he is unable to accede to your request. Under the present arrangement the little girl is entirely happy and content and it does not seem right or reasonable to upset and unsettle her. She is still too young and too sensitive to be burdened with responsibilities or divided loyalties.

Very sincerely, etc."

Fanny had worked herself up to such a pitch of expectation, was so all but certain that David would let her have Sheila the next summer, that she had a small nervous collapse from disappointment. It was a long time before she pulled herself out of it. A hard year followed. She filled her life as best she could with her friends and Garrett's friends, the girls where she worked, her housekeeping, the many delightful things Garrett found for her to do in New York.

Garrett kept his word, and did not make one more to her. She was not in love with Garrett, but without him life would have been intolerable.

What Fanny really wanted was Sheila. The desire, the hunger for her little daughter had burst its bounds. She was always thinking about her, always making plans to see her. And lying in bed one early morning in May, she made a sudden resolve. David or no David, Brownbecks or no Brownbecks, she would see Sheila—and soon.

Sheila's birthday was next week. Was it possible that her baby would soon be 19 years old? How she must have changed! What had they done to her? What had they told her about her mother? She would go to Cloughbarre.

She must have the answers to her questions; must find out what they had done to her little girl.

(Copyright, 1930, By Mateel Howe Farnham.)

Driven by her hunger to see Sheila, Fanny carries out her plan tomorrow. Will she succeed?

der such conditions, he said, and the situation demanded some definite and constructive relief.

"Confidence in the integrity and capacity of government is shaken," he said. "It is no time for tampering with this problem. A definite solution is demanded."

Kenneth Mackintosh, former chief justice of the state of Washington, said:

"It is not to be wondered at that failure marked the first years of the effort to enforce the eighteenth amendment by inefficient and violent means, with an inexperienced personnel suffering from political and other interference, and by attempting to exceed the scope of practical federal authority."

"Since the introduction of civil service and especially since the transfer of enforcement to the department of justice and the placing of it under the direction of intelligent and earnest officials, substantial progress has been made in some respects."

Must Enforce Law

"And while the majority of this commission think that even with further increase and raising of standards in personnel and added equipment reasonable satisfactory enforcement can not be attained in view of the opposition thereto in the populous centers of the country, and that the eighteenth amendment therefore can not become nationally effective, yet those holding this view recognize that some time must elapse before any revision of the amendment can take place and agree that during such time every effort should be made to secure such enforcement as is possible."

"If a general public sentiment can be aroused throughout the nation for prohibition the law can be enforced as well as any other police law. This is a 'consummation devoutly to be wished' and worked for. But if unattainable, nullification can not be tolerated, we are to continue to have constitutional government. Such a condition means not government but chaos."

"If such further effort is not productive of reasonable enforcement and observance and private and state cooperation, the revision of the eighteenth amendment should take the form of making it more flexible so that there can rest in the congress the power to meet changing conditions and differing situations in different localities."

The bartender has given place to the bootlegger, and the latter, with more cunning and cash than the former had, must not be allowed to succeed by reason of society confining itself to but one inflexible way to thwart him. If the constitution made it possible to deprive the bootlegger of his profits and to promote the doctrine of temperance the possibility for nationwide prohibition would be rendered a reasonable actuality."

"Mr. Anderson has presented in his statement a plan for control under the proposed revision of the amendment, which is the result of careful and scientific thought and seems to meet the necessities of the situation more adequately than any other that has been so far suggested."

"Though the eighteenth amendment has not produced all that some may have dreamed it might, yet the fact should not be overlooked that it has marked a long step forward. It is now time to take the next step in the same direction. To stand still now would mean final loss of all that has been so far gained."

Judge Paul J. McCormick of Los Angeles, said:

"The outstanding achievement of the eighteenth amendment has been the abolition of the legalized open saloon in the United States. Social and economic benefits to the people have resulted and it is this proven gain in our social organization that has justified the experiment of national prohibition."

"I am unable to find that there has been any further general moral improvement shown. It has been so clearly established that contempor-aneously with national prohibition there has been developed such a widespread spirit of lawlessness, hypocrisy and unprecedented disrespect for authority that in fairness and candor it must be stated that in the final analysis of conditions now, no other national moral improvement can be credited to prohibition. Nevertheless, the gain should not be jeopardized until it has been demonstrated after the fairest possible trial that the experiment is completed and has proven to be a failure.

"The evidence has raised the doubt in my mind as to whether the enforceability of this law has been conclusively determined. . . .

Doubts Value of Systems

"My study of the systems of liquor control in other countries and of plans that have been submitted to the commission to supplant present conditions in the United States leaves me in doubt as to whether any of them would be adaptable to our diversified, populous and extensive nation or to the heterogeneous aspect of its people. The plan developed by Mr. Anderson and presented in his statement seems to me to be the best, and if after further trial prohibition is not enforceable I should favor serious consideration of this system. I believe that the experience in one of the states of the dispensary system has demonstrated the insufficiency of such a solution as a national institution."

"Absolute repeal is unwise. It would in my opinion reopen the saloon. This would be a backward step that I hope will never be taken by the United States. The open saloon as the greatest enemy of temperance and has been a chief cause of much political corruption throughout the country in the past. These conditions should never be revived."

"It is my belief that a solution of this vexatious problem would be accelerated by ascertaining the majority sentiment of our citizenry upon the desirability of prohibition as a national policy. This public attitude has never been directly expressed through legal processes. It could be learned by direct submission of the repeal of the eighteenth amendment through state conventions and under Article V of the constitution. I favor and recommend such action. The submission processes should be arranged and timed so as to avoid confusing the prohibition question with party or other issues or campaigns."

CONGRESSMEN FROM WISCONSIN TO VOTE TOGETHER ON RULES

Believe Badger Lawmakers Will Win Better Committee Positions

BY RUBY A. BLACK Post-Crescent Washington Correspondent

Washington — Wisconsin congressmen are expected to vote, practically as a unit, for a liberalization of the rules of the house of representatives when the seventy-second congress convenes.

Out of their advantageous position in the next Congress, with Republican organization of the House at stake, it is expected that the Wisconsin delegation may win two points: Better committee assignments for some members, and the changes in the rules which they have long wished.

For one thing, they expect to help make it easier for a committee "discharged" and the bill brought to the floor for consideration. An example of a measure which a large number of congressmen support but which is pigeonholed in committee, is the measure to pay veterans cash now for their adjusted compensation certificates. Under the present rules it is easy for a committee to pigeon hole a measure which administration leaders do not want passed.

Rep. Charles A. Kading of Water town is the only Wisconsin congressman who has issued a formal statement on the question now agitating the Capitol. He did so at the request of this correspondent, saying:

No Politics

"I am more interested in issues and principles than I am in partisan politics."

"My course in Congress has been first, for that which is best for people of my district, second, for my state, and third, for the United States as a whole. And this course seems to have been satisfactory to my constituents."

"I believe that when the country is vitally interested in such great issues as the soldiers' bonus settlement and the prohibition question, the membership of the House should be given an opportunity to vote on such questions. Under existing rules of the House, this is impossible unless a small number of leaders and the Rules committee consent. I favor more liberal rules in the conduct of the business of the House."

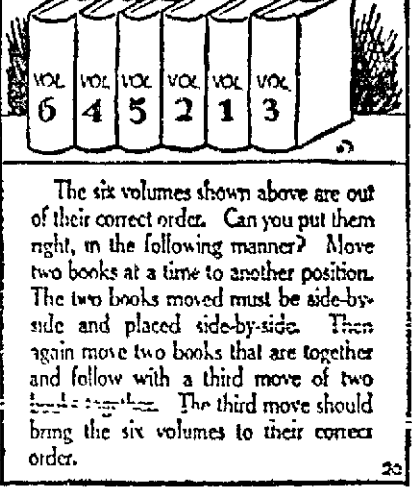

"It is too early for me to say whom I will support as Speaker of the House in the 72nd Congress."

Rep. William H. Stafford of Milwaukee, most conservative of them all, is likewise for liberalization of the rules, but refuses to specify.

The rest of the Wisconsin congressmen are expected to support such a move, which may emanate from the Democrats or from the independents. It is a foregone conclusion that the rules will be changed, at least to some extent.

It is a possibility that some of the Wisconsin congressmen may get better committee assignments. For example, they may fight for a place on the Committee on Agriculture, Al-

LAW INVOKED TO LOCATE HIDDEN FUND OF COLONY

Over $600,000 Rumored Hidden by Late "King"

Benjamin Purnell

St. Joseph, Mich. — (AP) — The law invoked yesterday in a treasure hunt which has for its prize between $600,000 and $700,000—hidden riches of the late "King" Benjamin Purnell of the House of David colony.

Judge H. T. Dewhirst, who was counsel for the colony during the life of "King" Ben and now is the leader, filed suit in Berrien-co. circuit court for a writ which would compel Mrs. Ada Ross Schneider, for 25 years auditor and secretary of the colony, to disclose the hiding place of the money.

Mrs. Schneider's attorney, George H. Bookwalter, said she had told him the secret wealth is in $1,000 bills, locked in vaults whose location was revealed only to her and to a few other women in the colony. Existence of the money, the attorney said his client had told him, was not known even to Dewhirst although he has been head of the colony since "King" Benjamin's death, three years ago.

Mrs. Schneider had left the colony and is preparing to bring suit to recover for her services. Attorney Bookwalter said the colony had offered to settle with her for $5,000. Now, however, Judge Dewhirst asks a complete accounting and directions for finding the hidden hoard of $1,000 bills.

There were allusions to the secret wealth a year and a half ago, while Judge Dewhirst and "King" Benjamin's widow, "Queen" Mary Purnell, were contesting for leadership of the colony. Their difficulties were not aired in court, however, and "Queen" Mary advocated without any public discussion of colony finances.

Attorney Bookwalter said Mrs. Schneider had assured him the money still is safe, unless colony members have discovered its hiding place by chance.

APPLY FOR GAS TAX REFUNDS BY JAN. 31

Outagamie-co residents planning to make application to the state treasurer for refunds of gas taxes paid during 1930 on gasoline used for other purposes than in motor vehicles, have about two weeks left to file their claims with the state. Refunds can be claimed on all taxes paid for gasoline used for cleaning, painting, farm machinery, motor boats or other uses except motor- ing. Claims may be made up to the end of January.

KONJOLA WON FOR THIS MAN

Des Moines Resident, Restored to Health More Than Year Ago, Gives New Medicine Credit

MR. DUKE W. DAVIS

"I took Konjola more for a tonic than a medicine and it certainly gave me splendid results," said Mr. Duke W. Davis, 1817 East Grand avenue, Des Moines. "I had very little appetite, food did not taste right, and I always felt tired. I also suffered some from nervousness and I did not sleep well at night."

"Soon after I began using Konjola, my nerves quieted. My appetite increased and I began to relish my food. It has been a year since I took this good medicine and I am still enjoying excellent health. Konjola, in my opinion, is a very good medicine and tonic."

Konjola is all that its friends claim for it. Taken regularly over a six to eight week period, it has proven America's foremost medicine for ailments of the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels and rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness.

Konjola is sold in Appleton at Schlintz Drug Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

PORTFOLIOS OF TRUSTS SHIFT, REPORTS SHOW

Substantial Blocks Held in Public Utilities and Railroads

BY CHARLES F. SPEARE
Copyright 1931, By Cons. Press
Wall Street, New York (CPA)—Because of the size of its assets, amounting to over $333,000,000, and the number of its shareholders, who represent an army of more than 91,000 investors scattered all over the United States, the annual report of the United Founders Corporation published Monday attracted much attention.

It comes at a time, also, when there is great interest in discovering how the American management trusts met the first test in their history and the degree to which they have shifted their portfolios in line with changes established in different groups of securities.

To Wall Street this shift was the most interesting feature of the report, as it provided an index to the attitude of a large body of trained observers and statisticians on the future trend of different classifications of stocks. The United Founders portfolio is divided into five different groups of stocks; namely, public utilities, railroads, insurance companies, investment companies and industrial and miscellaneous shares. In each one of these the corporation holds substantial blocks.

The comparisons as to ownership are as of May 31, 1930, when the last previous report was published, and Nov. 30, which represents the end of the company's fiscal year.

This comparison indicates that in the six months period United Founders reduced its holdings in such stocks as American Telephone & Telegraph, Bell Telephone of Canada, Hydro-Electric securities, International Telephone and Telegraph, Seaboard Investment Trust, Standard Gas & Electric and Western Union Telegraph. It increased its investment in American Superpower, American Water Works, Columbia Gas & Electric, Consolidated Gas, Electric Bond & Share, Electric Power & Light, Pacific Gas & Electric, Public Service of New Jersey, Southern California Edison, Standard Power & Light, United Corporation, United Gas Improvement and United Light & Power. It held 437,662 optional warrants of the public utility holding company, which were not on the May 31 list.

In the railroad group substantial reductions were shown in the stocks of the Allegheny Corporation, Atchafalpa, Pennroad Corporation, and Union Pacific. Increases were made in the shares of the Baltimore & Ohio, Bangor & Aroostook, Canadian Pacific, Erie, Lehigh Valley, New York Central, Nickel Plate, Southern Pacific and Southern Railway.

In the insurance company share group the most important changes were increases in insurance shares over 20,000 to management stock over 20,000 to over 24,000 shares and in Maryland Casualty stock from 7,532 to 21,000 shares. In investment company shares large reductions took place in the holdings of Chicago Corporation, Chicago Investors, Continental Shares, and Tri-Continental, with important increases in North and South American "A" shares and in those of Sterling Securities and United National.

The most significant change in the investment policy of the corporation is to be found in its stock list holdings, where there have been sharp reductions in copper and nickel but new investments in such prominent issues as General Electric, General Foods, General Motors, American Smelting & Refining, S. S. Kresge, Liggett & Meyers, Sears Roebuck, United States Steel, and Warner Pictures. While the company reduced its line of Montgomery Ward stock, it purchased 3,000 shares of Sears Roebuck.

Against a decrease from 20,000 shares in May to 12,300 shares in November of Westinghouse Electric was the initial purchase of 4,500 shares of General Electric. The share of the latter item was a surprise in view of the general shrinkage in securities during most of the last year and a half.

STEEL HEAD'S TALK BRINGS STOCK ADVANCE

dated with an address by James A. Farrell, United States Steel president, before the Wholesale Grocers association, he market moved forward with more briskness than has been witnessed in several days.

Advancing tendencies met increasing resistance, however, and as prices approached previous resistance levels dullness beset trading. Early gains, though, were largely held:

Some Specialists In Excess Fat Make Thousands Thin Since this new discovery

In old days, doctors were not often consulted in obesity. People simply assumed that excess fat meant too much food, too little exercise. They feared the doctor would prescribe starvation.

Now that has changed. Science has discovered that a scanty gland secretion is a great cause of excess fat. Doctors the world over know how to correct it. And some of them are telling thousands the way to normal figures.

The factor they use is employed in Marmola prescription tablets. A world-famous medical laboratory prepares them to fit the average case. Thus anyone can now deal with obesity in the right way at small cost. This way supplies a lacking factor which largely controls nutrition. It helps turn food into fuel and energy when too much goes to fat. No help in all medicine is more widely accepted today.

Marmola has been used for 24 years

BUMBLEBEES HELP CLOVER, ALFALFA

Insect Worth $10,000,000
to Country, State Entomologist Claims

Madison—Being friends of the bumblebee is a good thing, says state entomologist E. L. Chambers. The 47 varieties of bumblebees found in this country are responsible for good clover and alfalfa seed crops to a great extent, as the bumblebees are responsible for a great deal of pollination except in dry seasons when the blossoms are more available to honey bees.

Thousands of bumblebees have been sleeping in some clump of moss or trash since last July and August, Mr. Chambers says. These two summer months, Mr. Chambers says, are the festival and honeymoon periods of the big black and yellow bees. During this time when the nectar flow on clovers and alfalfa is plentiful, from 100 to 500 males and queens may be produced by a single colony. Following the mating time the males eventually die and the queens go to sleep for nine months so that they do not wake until the following March and April. No male bee lives over winter.

Because of last summer's drought, Wisconsin's bumblebee crop this coming year is apt to be short, Mr. Chambers says, but as each queen which comes through the winter is capable of producing hundreds of bees this next season, their protection is necessary. Skunks are one of the bumblebees greatest enemies as they search out hiding places of the bees and eat them.

When the queen wakes from her solitary slumber this coming spring she will find an old mouse nest or build a nest of her own, collect nectar, build a cluster of 6 or 12 cells, lay her first batch of eggs and construct a honey pot which she keeps filled for use during bad weather or at night. What spare time she has she spends incubating the eggs. The eggs hatch in four days and the young bees, which are all workers, are full grown in 11 days and become perfect workers in 22 days. The life of a worker is about four weeks and the period from spring to summer is spent increasing the worker colony up to 200 to 400 bees. Then the queen is ready to retire and lay the eggs which will be hatched into males and queens for the next season's progeny.

Ranger Captain Becomes Texas Adjutant General

Austin, Texas—(AP)—A tight-lipped ranger captain from the mesquite and chaparral dotted ranch country just north of the Mexican border is bringing his $300 "Sunday gun" and ponies to Austin soon to become the new adjutant general of Texas.

Bill Sterling, 40, tall and handsome a daring son of the out-of-doors, was appointed to the office by Gov.-elect Ross S. Sterling and the senate is expected to confirm the action next week. The two Sterlings are not related.

"Captain Bill" is true to type. He was chosen by Gutson Borglum, sculptor, as a model for the proposed monument to the Texas rangers, whose deeds as peace officers have been heralded throughout the nation.

The next adjutant general received his college education at Texas A. and

A powder burn kept Sterling from passing the eye tests for overseas duty in the World war. He entered the ranger service and rose to captain of Camp D, the mounted rangers, which patrols about one-fourth of the Texas-Mexico border.

One of his proudest possessions is his "Sunday gun," a $300 six-shooter presented by the people of Laredo. It is pearl handled and bears his brand and name. However, he used a

M. from 1906 to 1908. He was a classmate of R. L. Robertson, whom he will succeed as adjutant general.

Much of the border bandit war of 1915 was fought in the vicinity of the Sterling ranch, in Brooks-co. Sterling became chief scout for the third cavalry in that border warfare. Major General Frank McCoy praised his work.

His eyes light with pride when he speaks of the riding and roping ability of his daughter, Inez, only eight years old. Captain Sterling believes in talking little. He says he plans to offer a medal to the ranger getting his name in the newspapers the least.
